JUDGE WILLIAM F. FRANK DIES OF HEART ATTACK

End Comes In Chambers At Supreme Court In Jefferson City

ONLY STATE-WIDE GOP, OFFICE HOLDER

Passing Arouses Political Conjecture As To Successor

By The Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 9.—Quiet-spoken Judge William F. Frank—the Republican party's only state-wide office holder and a chief GOP hope in November—died of a heart attack in his chambers this morning.

The judge, a brother of Glenn Frank, chairman of the Republican policy committee, would have been 64 in November. He had been in good health and attended court yesterday.

Last night the Kirksville jurist became ill and a doctor was with him two hours. He improved today, however, and arose this morning and shaved preparatory to the court day. His niece, Mrs. Ed Dereus, called upon him in chambers at 9:30 this morning and found him lying down resting. When she returned in about half an hour he was dead.

Judge Frank went to the high court 10 years ago in the Hoover landslide and Republican strategists had looked to his fall candidacy as their logical rallying point against the recently-split Democrats.

He would have been opposed by former State Senator Albert M. Clark, the Democratic nominee and a choice of T. J. Pendergast's Kansas City organization.

Political Conjecture

Hardly had word of the veteran jurist's death spread through the capitol before political conjecture developed over the circumstances.

The court vacancy, coming just after the opening of the fall term, probably will mean a quick appointment from Gov. Lloyd C. Stark, now vacationing in the West. Many wondered if the governor would appoint the nominee, Clark, who has the same Kansas City organization support which inspired the governor to take the primary stump against Judge James V. Billings of Kennet who was defeated by Judge James M. Douglas, a Stark appointee.

Others, however, said it was doubtful if the governor could appoint Clark even if he so desired. These observers pointed to the fact that Clark's state senate term actually does not expire until next November and that the state constitution prohibits anyone holding two elective offices at the same time.

The Republican state committee which will hold an organization meeting here next week probably will select a nominee to run in judge Frank's place.

A clear indication of the strong Republican hope that had been pinned to the Kirksville jurist's candidacy came last month when the Republicans chose his home as the site for their first state-wide rally. The judge's more nationally known brother, Glenn Frank, chairman of the policy committee of the Republican party, attended that gathering.

It was there the Republicans gave the sign that they intended to use Judge Frank to turn the recent Democratic fight to their own purposes. Barak T. Mattingley, state chairman, put the issue squarely on the plane of the healing Democratic supreme court row when he declared:

"In view of the strenuous campaign conducted by the governor on behalf of Judge Douglas to remove the sinister shadow of boss control from the supreme court and in view of Senator Clark's boast of Pendergast support, how much longer can governor Stark remain silent on this important issue?

"If Mr. Pendergast would have secured control of the court by four to three by the election of the man whom he last endorsed (Billings) how about the election of the man who is his first choice?"

It was an obvious reference to Albert M. Clark who would have been Judge Frank's opponent.

Rose To Chief Justice

Judge Frank, a school teacher who rose to the chief justiceship of the state supreme court, was admitted to the bar in 1903 and practiced law at Kirksville until 1925.

For two years he was an assistant attorney general, resigning to become commissioner of

TO NEGOTIATE ON DEMANDS AGAIN

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, Sept. 9—(AP)—Premier Milan Hodza's office tonight announced negotiations would be resumed tomorrow between the Czechoslovak government and the Nazi-supported Sudeten German minority over Sudeten autonomy demands.

At the same time the government's plan aimed to satisfy Sudeten demands was disclosed providing for reorganization of the Czechoslovak republic into self-governing cantons grouping together various nationalities.

Foreign policy, finances and national defense would remain under control of the central government according to the program already submitted to the Sudeten leaders.

The plan was understood to have approval of the Runciman mission, unofficial British mediators.

NEW PROPOSAL FOR NEW COUNTY JAIL CONSIDERED

County Court Accepts A PWA, Offer Amounting To $16,200

If plans now under way carry through Pettis county will have a new jail in the not far distant future. The county court has accepted a PWA offer of forty-five per cent of $36,000, or $16,200, with the provision that the county supply the 55 per cent, or $19,800, for the construction of a new building.

Acceptance of the plan has been sent to PWA headquarters.

Lewis Andrews, Sedalia architect, has prepared a tentative drawing, of a concrete and steel one-story building, constructed so that a second story can be added if desired. It will have a basement and will be modern in every respect.

Members of the county court said this afternoon there is no obligation on the court's part to reimburse Mr. Andrews for his preparatory work, but if the county does appropriate the $19,800 and the plans for the building are carried out, Mr. Andrews will be the architect employed.

The members of the court said there has been nothing decided as to a location. The county no longer owns the present county jail building, therefore, a new location would be sought.

The county court, some months ago, purchased the old Y. M. C. A. building on Fourth street and Lamine avenue, with the view of using part of that building for a jail. They have learned, however, that that building is not very suitable to be converted into jail property, and it will be used to house other county and state offices.

Authorities indicated a manslaughter charge against her would be dropped.

PLEBESCITE NOW THE OBJECTIVE IN BORDER CRISIS

Nazis In Defiant Mood Predict Hitler Will Demand It

FAILS TO DELIVER SCHEDULED SPEECH

Explained Reichsfuehrer Deeply Engrossed In "Business of State"

NURNBERG, Germany, Sept. 9—(AP)—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler, apparently too deeply engrossed in the crisis over Czechoslovakia, failed today to deliver a scheduled address at the tenth annual Nazi party congress.

The explanation was given that "business of the state prevented" his appearance.

He was understood to be studying the Czechoslovak situation after Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop had reported to him on a conference with Sir Nevile Henderson, British ambassador to Germany.

High Nazis, in defiant mood, predicted Hitler would demand—and get—a plebiscite for the Sudeten German minority in Czechoslovakia.

It was the fuehrer's first failure to attend the annual women's auxiliary rally during the decade of Nurnberg congresses.

Gertrud Scholtz-Klink, Nazi women's leader, told 20,000 disappointed women, "we know that what our fuehrer does is always right so we send him our greetings and pledge of loyalty."

Ribbentrop attended the rally after conferring for almost an hour with Sir Nevile. What they discussed was not disclosed.

Press For Plebescite

Nazis advancing the plebescite scheme at what they deemed an opportune moment argued that Hitler would give the British a chance to "save face" on the "failure" of their unofficial mediation efforts because "the plebiscite is a democratic insitution."

Der fuehrer firmly rejected all Czechoslovak efforts to compromise the Sudeten German minority dispute over self-government.

He was said to have called them "not subject to discussion" and to seem determined, after another day of numerous conferences behind the scenes of the annual Nazi party congress, to wear down British patience.

"The mission of Viscount Runciman (unofficial British mediator in Prague) is only another non-intervention committee," the prominent Nazis said, referring to international efforts to stop the Spanish war.

"The British fail completely to understand that Naziism is a highly dynamic movement which wants clear-cut decisions—no dilly-dallying."

The incident at Maehrisch-Ostrau, Czechoslovakia, Wednesday when a Sudeten German deputy allegedly was struck by the whip of a Czech policeman, was exploited to the limit in the Nurnberg press.

If the Prague government cannot keep order, the Nazis asked, how can it have authority to conclude binding agreements?

It seemed clear the public mind was being prepared carefully for theidea Germany must help the Sudeten German brothers in the name of humanity and to establish law and order.

DISCUSS PASSAGE OF SOVIET TROOPS

By The Associated Press.

GENEVA, Sept. 9—The passage of Soviet Russian troops through Rumania to Czechoslovakia in the event of war was authoritatively reported to have been the subject of a conference here today between the Soviet and Rumanian foreign ministers.

Maxim Litvinoff of Russia and Petrescu Comnen of Rumania, here for league of nations council meetings beginning today, were the conferees, and persons close to both left no doubt they discussed courses to be followed if conflict comes over the Sudeten German crisis.

These persons said there had been no agreement but there would be further talks.

(Russia is pledged to join with France in coming to the aid of Czechoslovakia if the little republic is invaded. In such an event a route for Russian troop movements must be found since there is no common Russian-Czechoslovak frontier.)

THREE CARDINALS IN SERVICES FOR AN ARCHBISHOP

Enormous Gathering At Rites For Patrick Cardinal Hayes

By Mary Elizabeth Plummer

NEW YORK, Sept. 9—(AP)—In a scene of solemn splendor seldom if ever surpassed in America's ecclesiastical history, mourning thousands assembled today for the last rites for Patrick Cardinal Hayes, archbishop of New York.

Fifth avenue, symbol of everything modern, was thronged around St. Patrick's cathedral where the funeral mass was celebrated with a ritual centuries old.

In magnitude and dignity, the funeral of the gentle prelate who rose from a humble life as an east side boy to become spiritual leader of more than 1,000,000 Roman Catholics was a tribute such as has been paid to few Americans.

Men and women of many faiths government and city officials, mingled in the cathedral, with representatives of Catholic orders and institutions and a tremendous gathering of mourning laymen.

Great Array of Clergy

The greatest array of Catholic ecclesiastics ever to attend the funeral of a New York churchman prayed for the repose of the cardinal's soul.

Besides the crowd inside the cathedral, the street without was jammed with mourners who heard the pontifical requiem mass over a public address system.

Three cardinals—George Cardinal Mundelein of Chicago, Denis Cardinal Dougherty of Philadelphia and Roderick Cardinal Villeneuve of Quebec—fourteen archbishops, fifty-three bishops, and more than 2,000 priests took part in the services.

The great procession into the cathedral was a scene such as New York has not witnessed in two decades—since the funeral of Cardinal Hayes' predecessor, Cardinal Farley.

It was a sombre pageant in the cathedral, where Cardinal Hayes' body, robed in his priestly vestments, lay on a catagalque before the high altar.

The services which were to end hours later with the burial of Cardinal Hayes in a crypt in the cathedral and with the raising of his red hat—insignia of his membership in the sacred college—above the high altar, began with the great procession of clergy.

Reverent thousands who had no hope of getting in to see Cardinal Mundelein, Cardinal Hayes' schoolmate of fifty years ago, celebrate the mass, arrived hours before the procession formed, and stood in pale sunlight.

YOUTH IS HELD FOR DELINQUENCY

PARIS, Mo., Sept. 9—(AP)—Gerald Delmore, 14, was held today on charges of juvenile delinquency and incorrigibility for the abduction of Miss Elinor Fern Dooley, 23, rural school teacher, near here last Monday.

Prosecuting Attorney Thomas V. Proctor, who filed the charges yesterday, dropped plans for a sanity hearing, and said he would ask the circuit court to sentence the boy to the state reformatory "for four or five years."

Miss Dooley, taken from her classroom while being threatened with a knife, was unharmed. Delmore was captured an hour later.

TWO LOSE LIVES AS TRUCK OVERTURNS

Two men identified as James C. Karr, 30, formerly of Battle Creek, Mich., and Yvon Cerf, 45, formerly of San Francisco, were instantly killed about 1 o'clock this morning, when a 1928 Reo speed wagon panel truck, in which they were riding overturned at the junction of highway 5 and 52, just east of Versailles, Mo.

According to information received here, the car was evidently being driven at a fast rate of speed and the driver of the truck, probably being unfamiliar with the junction, crashed into a bank, the truck nosediving into the air and rolled over on the men who had been thrown through the top when the truck struck the bank.

The men were badly injured, one suffered lacerations on the face and a fracture of the skull, while the other had head injuries and his throat was slashed, both suffered broken necks. It was evident both were killed instantly.

The men were identified by J. P. McKensey, manager of the Kaiser Camp in the Lake of the Ozarks region. He said that Cerf had been a timekeeper and Karr had been a stone cutter at the camp.

However, shortly before they had been identified by Mr. McKensey, Cerf had been tentatively identified by a telegram in his pocket as Charles B. Sheehan, of Kansas City. The telegram in his pocket was addressed to the name of Charles B. Sheehan and signed, Mamie.

ASK COOPERATION ON FAIR LABOR STANDARDS ACT

Wage-Hour Administrator Intends For Equal Enforcing of Law

CHARLESTON, S. C., Sept. 9.—Elmer F. Andrews, wage-hour administrator, called on industry and labor today to help obtain strict compliance with the fair labor standards act.

Andrews said, in an address prepared for a meeting of the International Association of Government Labor Officials, that his first important job would be telling employers what records they must keep after the law becomes effective Oct. 24.

"So great is the task of distributing precise information on this point and of laying the ghosts of unfounded apprehensions," he said, "that I am calling upon organized industry, both employers and labor, to cooperate x x x by circularizing its members both as to the basic terms of the act and the requirements in connections with record keeping and inspection.

"And, of extreme importance, by urging its members to assist in obtaining a compliance with these provisions from the start."

Andrews expressed appreciation of efforts of organized labor to clarify the act for its members and of the cooperation which "has been evidenced generally by industry."

Equal Enforcement Aim

He said his primary concern would be equal enforcement of the law. He observed that decisions remained to be made on questions such as whether certain industries would be subject to the law because of their seasonal or interstate character and whether special regulations must be drafted for learners and the handicapped.

"At the moment," he said, "I can state only one general policy in connection with such questions as these, and that is that we expect to be guided by what we know to have been the intent of congress in enacting this law.

"That intent was clearly that as many workers as possible should be given the protection of basic labor standards."

The administration sought to allay concern expressed in some quarters that the act would require the keeping of voluminous records.

"It is not proposed to require a great mass of records and reports in addition to those now kept by employers," he said. "We shall make every effort to keep record-keeping at a minimum.

"It may be that only one or two lines in addition to the records now required under the old age insurance titles of the social security act may be required."

These forecasts, based on conditions prevailing September 1, compared with 2,566,221,000 bushels of corn and 955,989,000 bushels of wheat indicated a month ago.

Corn production was 2,644,995,000 bushels last year, and the 1927-36 ten-year average was 2,306,157,000 bushels. The indicated acre yield Sept. 1 was 26.6 bushels, compared with 27.8 a month ago, 28.2 last year, and 22.9 the ten-year average.

The total wheat crop, winter wheat and spring wheat combined, was 873,993,000 bushels last year and the ten-year average was 752,891,000. Yield per acre indicated Sept. 1 was 13.2 bushels, compared with 13.5 a month ago, 13.6 last year and 13.5 the ten-year average.

ACCUSED BEGIN TO APPEAR IN COURT

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 9.—More than a score of laundry operators began appearing in court today in response to price-fixing indictments returned by a grand jury against 50 persons after a two-months investigation of labor troubles in Kansas City.

The county grand jury's report stated evidence of price-fixing by laundry operators and laundry union representatives had been uncovered along with the disclosure that a "minimum" price had been enforced in some cases by intimidation and vandalism.

Meantime an early morning bombing of a drug store at 7150 Prospect avenue was investigated by police. Drug stores figured heavily in the more than 100 victims of window smashers here since Jan. 1. Yesterday the grand jury placed the blame for window smashing and bombing on "so-called labor organizers" whose interest in self-enrichment led them to prey on "honest union labor" and the employer alike.

Among persons whose indictments were disclosed today through their appearance on the serving of warrants was Joseph B. Arvin, organiber for a laundry workers union.

Arvin was accused of conspiring to fix laundry prices. The price-fixing conspiracy charge also was the basis of indictments against more than a score of laundry owners and operators.

As deputies began the serving of warrants today, two labor attorneys, Clif Langsdale and Roy W. Rucker, appeared before county officials and volunteered to produce any of their clients who may have been indicted without the necessity of arrest. Rucker is attorney for Arvin.

JOHN CROSS INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

John Cross, 19 years old, son of Ralph Cross, 1305 South Lamine avenue, received painful and possibly serious injuries late Thursday night when a Ford coupe which he was driving crashed into the rear of an automobile near Benton and Vest streets in Marshall and then swerved into a telephone pole and was badly smashed.

Cross was given treatment at a hospital in Marshall and then brought to Sedalia by three Sedalians who were there and taken to the home of his father where he is under the care of a physician. He suffered a bad laceration on the head and chest injuries.

According to information received from Marshall, Cross had "borrowed" the coupe which belongs to a salesman for Swift & Co., and was driving this automobile when the accident occurred.

Three youths from Sedalia who brought Cross to his home were Raymond Raines, Charles Newman and Benny Roberts, all of whom were questioned by the chief of police of Marshall, and later released.

BUYING BRISKER IN RETAIL TRADE

NEW YORK, Sept. 9—(AP)—Retail sales at leading centers of distribution this week averaged 3 to 8 per cent above last week, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

Start of the official fall season with consumer response brisk in most all retail lines brought gains in wholesale orders which narrowed the sag in wholesale volume under a year ago to but 4 to 12 per cent, the credit agency added.

In the southwest sales lagged only 2 to 5 per cent behind last year.

PROPOSAL FOR A POPULAR VOTE ON WAR REJECTED

French In 1922 Refused To Accept Scheme Suggested

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—The state department has just disclosed how France rejected a German proposal, made in 1922, that European powers agree to take a popular vote before going to war.

The scheme would have operated for 30 years. Had it been adopted, it would be in effect during the present European crisis.

Although failure of the proposal was announced at the time, its details are contained in hitherto secret documents being published in the regular 15-year old reports of the state department.

Germany proposed that the United States initiate conversations about such an agreement. Under it, France, Great Britain, Italy and Germany would promise Washington not to resort to war against each other without a plebiscite.

Charles Evans Hughes, then secretary of state, decided to submit the idea first to the French. He considered it unwise to approach other governments unless France treated the proposal seriously.

The formal French objection was that her constitution gave to parliament the duty of making war, and acceptance of the German proposal would require a constitutional change.

But Ambassador Jusserand, carrying his instructions from Paris in hand, told Secretary Hughes the Germans couldn't be relied upon, that if they wanted to make war they could easily get a vote to that effect, and that they were looking for revenge against the French.

Hughes argued there was great power in "auto-suggestion" and if a nation determined to set itself toward peace and not war, that would be helpful. Furthermore, he said, the world was war weary and the time was ripe to oppose war.

Jusserand resubmitted the proposal to Premier Poincaire of France, but the answer again was "no." The premier contended that "with the hatred which they (the Germans) were instilling in the youth by instruction in their schools, they could easily provide for a plebiscite whenever they wanted it."

SITDOWN STRIKE AT ARMOUR PLANT

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 9.—A sit-down strike of CIO workers halted operations of Armour and Company packing plant here today. The plant employes more than 1,000 workers.

Alex Hudson, representative of Local 232 of the Packing House Workers Organizing Committee, said its 900 members at the plant called the strike because the company declined to pay five members of a grievance committee for the time they spent talking with company representatives yesterday.

Company officials declined immediate comment.

Hudson said he had telephoned Don Harris, Chicago, general chairman of the Packing House Workers Organizing Committee, a request that the strike be extended to all Armour plants.

Crowds gathered outside the plant saw workers milling about inside the building or standing idly on top.

CONSIDERS CRISIS IN EUROPE LIKE POKER GAME

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(AP)—A cable to a stock exchange firm today from its foreign correspondent about lined up the overseas situation from the standpoint of Wall Street. Meanwhile, stock markets must remain victims of irresponsible rumors."

COURT UPHOLDS INDICTMENT ON JAMES J. HINES

Sustains It On All Counts Including That of Conspiracy

JURY ABSENT AS DECISION READ

Mind Not Free From Doubt As To The Felony Charges

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9—Supreme Court Justice Ferdinand Pecora today sustained in its entirety the 13-count indictment charging Tammany District Leader James J. Hines with conspiracy and contriving a lottery.

He said that if the jury found the $20,000,000-a-year Dutch Schultz racket conspiracy did not extend beyond May 24, 1936—two years before Hines was arrested—it would be their duty to acquit the defendant on the misdemeanor count of conspiracy.

In such an event, he pointed out, the conspiracy count would be outlawed by the two-year statute of limitations.

Other Counts Felonies

The 12 other counts, charging the contriving of a lottery, are felonies.

The jury was absent when Justice Pecora read his decision.

"The court must frankly state," he said, "that its mind is not entirely free from doubt as to whether the evidence presented by the people constitutes a prima facie case against the defendant as charged in counts two to 13 inclusive"—the felony counts.

The evidence, he commented, was not that Hines was actually present at the scene of contriving the lotteries which the indictment charges the Dutch Schultz mob with operating.

Whether or not Hines "induced, encouraged or counselled" others to contrive the lotteries, he said, should be considered.

Justice Pecora quoted a ruling of law that doubt in a judge's mind should be resolved by the jury, inasmuch as the prosecution has no power to appeal the judge's decision.

"My own doubts," he said, "must therefore be resolved in favor of the people."

Justice Pecora said he still felt there should have been a count in Dewey's indictment charging Hines with conspiracy to obstruct justice.

He had said yesterday that such a charge, on the evidence presented by the state, would fit like a new suit of clothes.

ANTAGONISMS: AN ASSET TO TYRANNY

Never was the contrast between freedom and tyranny sharper than it is today. Hardly an issue of a daily newspaper appears without pointing it up.

One day's paper recently contained two stories which, when set side by side, express their own moral.

One of these stories came from Rome. It told how a decree of Mussolini's cabinet had ordered all Jews who moved into Italy since the World War to leave within six months. The measure applied to citizens and non-citizens alike, and asserted that the Jews represent "a dangerous factor in the spiritual and material life of the nation."

The other story came from Detroit, where a message from President Roosevelt was read to the annual encampment of the Jewish War Veterans of the United States. The message went as follows:

"The American people need no reminder of the services which those of the Jewish faith have rendered our nation. It has been a service with honor and distinction. History reveals that your people have played a great and commendable part in the defense of Americanism during the World War and prior wars, and have contributed much in time of peace toward the development and preservation of the glory and romance of our country and our democratic form of government."

* * *

In these two pronouncements from the heads of two great nations the divergent natures of tyranny and freedom are unmistakably revealed. It is not merely that the one is a harsh order of expulsion and the other a warm and friendly greeting. The very natures of the two kinds of society are involved.

A tyranny needs a scapegoat. There must be some one thing, or some one element, which can be blamed for things; something on which the discontent and blind antagonism of the people can be focussed. German tyranny decided to use the Jew for that scapegoat; bobbing along as the tail to Hitler's kite, Italian tyranny has decided to follow suit.

In a free state, the exact reverse of all this is true. Freedom must minimize the natural antagonisms of its people; it must give them a genuine and effective outlet for their discontent instead of inventing a fake one.

* * *

Free peoples don't want traditional rivalries and old suspicions sharpened. They have to get along with each other, and the easiest way is to be neighborly and let old hatreds die.

Does anyone need to ponder very long over this contrast before deciding which is the pleasanter sort of society to live in?

• SO THEY SAY

Especially in Czechoslovakia, where minorities are in the majority, we will demand increased rights for Hungarian groups.—Premier Bela Imredi of Hungary.

* * *

The crisis in character is more ominous today than the crisis in business, economics, political, governmental, or world affairs.—The Rev. Frank W. Murfeldt of New York.

* * *

In my opinion our economic difficulties can be traced to an unfavorable state of mind, a psychological condition which should have no place in our national economy.—William Green, president of the A. F. of L.

BOMBSHELL ON FACES

For a single casual interview, the recent session that an Emory University professor of psychology had with reporters carried more than its share of dynamite.

The professor, Dr. Hermon W. Martin, declared that extensive tests had led him to the convictions, among others, that (a) nobody could estimate anybody's age with any accuracy, and (b) it was impossible to tell whether a person was intelligent simply by studying his face.

If these statements get around the way professors' generalizations frequently do there's no telling what's going to come of it.

Look—if you can bring yourself to look, for the blossoming of innumerable toothless reconditioned cuties in sub-deb dresses where none grew before. Look, too, for a bumper crop of 16-year-olds in black, long-sleeved outfits calculated to convey the air of a femme fatale.

Is there sufficient ground to hope for some kind of revolution in the field of politics? Consider the number of lemons that have been swept into offices of one kind or another on the strength of a bulging forehead, masterful eyebrows, an intelligent-looking nose, and a pair of pincenez on a ribbon.

Probably there is no ground for hope at all. The people who judge candidates by their looks will now vote for new crops of lemons on the ground that if they don't look intelligent the chances are that they must be.

TIPPING UNDER CONTROL

Tipping for service has been a variety of things to a variety of people in the past. To the employe it has been in many cases his sole source of income. To the tipper it has been variously an automatic habit, a gesture of liberality, or simply a source of irritation.

Wage minimums have made tipping in most instances now merely a supplement to the employe's fixed income, but as a supplement in many cases which he cannot dispense with. Now in Finland tipping itself is being regulated. Two scales of minimums have been set, "geared" to the amount of the restaurant bill, one scale applying to the larger cities, the other to the small towns.

Advocates of a similar set-up in this country have appeared from time to time, but a man can't help but see a certain incongruity in a regulation being imposed on what originated as a spontaneous gesture of thanks. It would seem that the better reform might be to restore that gesture to its original state by seeing that the employe was not dependent upon it for a living.

Dutch government officials announce that no trans-Atlantic flights will be promoted by that country this year. Oh, there're just trying to attract attention.

Today's Fairy Tale: Once there was a man who unexpectedly inherited a fortune and did not announce that he would keep right on at the old job.

Civilization is getting along. In the future it may have to live in an underground cellar to avoid bombers but it is progressing in the types of cellars.

If there is a Paradise, I feel sure that it cannot be more beautiful than National Socialist Germany.—Dr. Robert Ley, head of the German Labor Front.

What democracy suffers from today is paralysis of will, and there can be no worse political or social disease than that. —Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University.

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY GO ROUND

TRADE MARK REGISTERED

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Newsmen who thronged the President's press conference last week were astonished at the heat he displayed in criticizing Detroit newspapers for the story that he had abandoned his trip to dedicate the International Bridge because of Michigan politics. Digs at the press are not unusual from the President, but generally they are good natured.

This one was quite different. He spoke with undisguised indignation.

What the newsmen didn't know was that he was not only spanking the Detroit papers but someone else—a member of his own family. The inside story of the incident illustrates the circuitous way in which Roosevelt sometimes operates.

The member of his family he was booting was G. Hall Roosevelt, brother of Mrs. Roosevelt.

Hall Roosevelt, connected with certain anti-New Deal business interests, has been secretly trying to harpoon the President's close friend and ardent disciple, Governor Frank Murphy. Early last month, before the Michigan State Democratic convention, Hall Roosevelt tried to supplant Murphy with State Highway Commissioner Murray D. Van Waggoner as the nominee for Governor.

The scheme fell through because Van Waggoner's lieutenants told him he couldn't beat Murphy.

Since then Hall Roosevelt has continued his undercover opposition against New Dealer Murphy. The Detroit news story, implying that the President had dropped his dedication trip because he had become convinced that Murphy's chances for re-election were hopeless, appeared the day after Hall Roosevelt talked to Washington correspondents.

Whether rightfully or wrongfully the President suspected his brother-in-law of planting the story and also of implying that he, Hall Roosevelt, was responsible for the change in the President's plans.

But he didn't call Hall in and bawl him out. Instead the President denounced the story as a "deliberate distortion" and announced his intention to campaign vigorously for Murphy next month—thus demonstrating to Hall Roosevelt's newspaper friends and business superiors that he is wholly without influence at the White House.

Maverick Out

Representative Maury Maverick, dynamic Texas crusader who was defeated for renomination, has definitely decided not to run as an independent this fall.

Like Senator James Pope, Idaho New Dealer who also fell by the wayside and considered making another try as an independent, Maverick has concluded to take his medicine. His reasons, however, were different from Pope's.

Pope quit because of lack of money to finance another campaign, plus the inability of the White House to go to bat for him after Jim Farley's telegram congratulating Pope's successful rival and assuring him of National Committee support.

For the President to back Pope after this declaration would have been interpreted as a slap at Farley. Roosevelt wasn't ready to do that, so Pope threw up the sponge.

Maverick had promises of financial backing and was keen to re-enter the race, but he was barred by an opinion from the Texas Attorney General that his candidacy would be illegal. Lawyer friends told him the ruling was faulty and would not stand up in the courts.

That didn't help Maverick, because a suit to override the opinion could not have been decided before the election.

Dove of Peace

Peace is in the making between Gov. George Earle of Pennsylvania and the C. I. O.

They split last spring when Earle refused to support Lieutenant Governor Tom Kennedy, United Mine Workers official, for Governor. Backed by Senator Joe Guffey, Kennedy was nosed out of the Democratic nomination by Alvin Jones, conservative Pittsburgh lawyer.

Jones and Earle were both supported by the A. F. of L., but only Earle assailed John Lewis during the bitter campaign. After the factional battle the Earle-Jones camp quickly patched up their differences with Guffey, but Lewis held off until recently.

Just before leaving for Mexico last week he gave a friendly nod to secret peace overtures from the Earle-Jones group, and sometime in the next couple of weeks there will be a private conference among them.

Behind Lewis' conciliatory attitude is the fear that unless the C. I. O. swings to the Democratic ticket, the Republicans will recapture the Keystone State—and that would be extremely bad medicine for labor in general and the C. I. O. in particular. As it is, the election battle is very close and uncertain.

Note—President Roosevelt has promised Pennsylvania Democrats that he will come into the State next month and campaign for them.

Georgia Lowdown

The following confidential views on the dramatic Georgia primary are from a letter written by a worker in the campaign headquarters of Senator Walter George to a superior in Washington:

"Sometimes I think the situation isn't so rosy as we think it is. For example, Cotton Ed's victory in South Carolina wasn't so hot. The mill towns gave him plenty of hell. There aren't as many textile workers in this State, but just the same I'm getting lots of bad reaction to George's vote against the wage-hour bill. I gather that a lot of trainmen are off the reservation, too. I have talked with ten conductors who are against him.

"Also, the Jews in Savannah are sore because of George's sneers at Ben Cohen. And this is funny. Darned if the Irish aren't resenting the cracks at Corcoran.

"What gives me real pause are the claims of the smart boys that the registration is way off. Well just between us that's a lot of baloney. Actually it is next to the highest in the history of the State.

"X went over to South Carolina to 'help out Ed Brown' (third candidate in the senatorial contest, who withdrew at the last moment and plumped for Cotton Ed). Undoubtedly it was he who pulled Brown out at the instance of some Eastern big shot. I haven't got all the lowdown yet but it apparently was a trade of some kind . . ."

Note—The writer of the letter is an active Republican. In his letter he relates that "George called me personally to congratulate me. Also, I saw him at Thomson."

Yesterday: Bruce Radford and Linda quarrel over Brown Donald. Then Linda picks up the mystery envelope which Bruce had given her uncle.

CHAPTER VIII

"I'LL get it for you, Uncle Sandy," said Linda.

She leaned over, but he jabbed her with his elbow.

"Uncle Sandy—" she reached, got it: the long envelope she had seen Bruce Radford give him. "I'll put it on the dresser," but he snatched it from her hands.

Why was that letter so important? Why didn't he wish her to touch it?

Linda went out on the porch. Sank into a rocker. The excitement of the auction; the meeting with Brown Donald; Monte Hill dropping down from the skies; Uncle Sandy's suddenly changed attitude toward her—his air of mystery about this letter Bruce Radford had given him.

It was all too much. Her shoulders sagged helplessly. So this was the Blue Grass she had longed for! She had left it as a young girl; and had held it since in the fragrant memory of a happy childhood. Now she was facing tough reality.

She felt like sending a telegram to Mr. Moss in New York. Saying, all's well at home; I'll take your offer if it's still open. She was a fool to give up a brilliant chance like that—a chance to become staff writer on a national magazine. Writing was her field; she didn't know a darn thing about horse racing.

She straightened. "You fool!" she told herself. "You asked for it; now you've got to take it."

No, she wouldn't go back. That would admit defeat. She'd carry on somehow—

"Miss Linda," Norman was at the doorway, "I turn out the light. Uncle Sandy he gone to sleep," he said.

"Thank you, Norman," she said bruskly. Then, "Norman, can't you get us a cook? I'm going to stay a while. It'll be too much for you, cooking and handling the colt, too."

Norman thought a moment. "There be Sis' Callie Tompkins; but—" he stopped.

"But what?"

"Well, ma'am," Norman shuffled his feet. "She be a good church member, but she—she got a powerful bad temper."

"Can she cook? And clean house?"

"Oh, yes, ma'am! An' if we git a 'possum—"

"Then get her."

"Yes, ma'am. I go tell her now."

LINDA leaned back. Tried to relax. Drew in a deep breath. What was that odor, brought by the wind soughing through the sycamores? Uh! A skunk!

A cat howled in the barn; she heard Golden Toy clumping nervously, uneasily, in his new home. She felt something jabbing her ankle—ouch! A mosquito. She rubbed the spot a moment. Then rose. Something brushed against her face, something unpleasant. She brushed it off—a spider's loose web.

From inside the house came the raucous snores of Uncle Sandy Gordon.

Linda laughed a hollow laugh. This was the romantic Blue Grass!

Suddenly, she remembered Uncle Sandy's snatching that envelope from her; the envelope Bruce had given to him quite casually, as though of no moment. What was in it that Uncle Sandy wanted to keep it from her hands?

Uncle Sandy had opened it when he hurried off "to see if the colt be bedded down." There was something in it he didn't want Linda to know; something, she felt, she should know of.

She thought a moment. Yes, she was going to look into that envelope. Maybe she shouldn't; but if she was going to look after Uncle Sandy, she should know the condition of his affairs. She felt that envelope contained something—

* * *

QUIETLY she went inside; peeped into Uncle Sandy's room. By light from the dining room she could see him stretched out, back toward her, in an old-fashioned night-shirt. Something was sticking out from under the pillow: the envelope.

She tiptoed in, reached for the envelope; he gave a sudden start. Began turning. She froze in her tracks. He relaxed, snored again. Now she had the envelope, was backing from the room. She bumped against the door-jamb. The wall shook. Again the horseman's snoring broke off; once more he started turning. If she were caught!

But the old man's head relaxed again on the pillow. Linda edged out, went down the corridor to her room, the spare room, at the end of the hall. She turned on the light, looked at the envelope. No inscription on it.

She opened it. A half dozen sheets of paper fell on the center-table. Papers bearing the words:

"I promise to pay on demand to William Radford" and signed "Alexander Gordon."

Eight notes, given over a series of 11 years—notes ranging from one for $250 (given in 1927) to one for $3000 (dated Jan. 1, 1936). A total of $9000 in notes!

Linda turned each paper over; on two only had payments been made; $40 on the $250 note; and $630 on the $3000 one. Since then, he had gotten that last $3500 loan.

Linda's eyes widened. William Radford had paid his $6000 loan back to Sandy Gordon. Then, in gratitude, had given Sandy Gordon money for his numerous breeding ventures—lent it without security! William Radford had been a great friend.

* * *

AND Bruce? He was a honey! He knew that Sandy Gordon was a never-pay-back. He had let the executors collect the note they held. But these, which he had found in his uncle's library, he had kept from them. Why, he could have forced Uncle Sandy to sell his farm!

Linda got to her feet. Felt blood rushing to her face. Bruce had been a thoroughbred. She had upbraided him unmercifully, and he had said nothing; he could have said plenty.

She'd never mention this to Uncle Sandy; but she must apologize to Bruce instantly.

She picked up the notes, put them back in the envelope, shaking her head. Then went to her uncle's room, slipped the envelope beneath his pillow. He was snoring strongly; he wouldn't hear her talking to Bruce.

She stepped to the old-fashioned wall telephone in the hall, cranked the handle for central. At last the switchboard operator answered.

"Mr. Bruce Radford's, please," she asked, in the country manner.

"Yes, ma'am. Try to get him."

At last, after several minutes of wire-buzzing, she heard, faintly, "Hello—hello—who you ringin'?"

"Is that Mr. Radford's farm?" Linda asked.

"Yes, ma'am." Now, she heard clearly.

"Let me speak with Mr. Bruce Radford, please."

"Well, he—he ain't here."

"What time do you expect him back?"

"I don't know, ma'am. He packed up before supper—went visitin' tonight—come home and had me put his things in his car. Said he'd be gone quite a spell. . . . No, ma'am, I don't know where he went. He said he'd send for his mail."

Linda made no reply. Slowly, mechanically, she put the receiver back on its hook.

AVIATION GASOLINE

At Regular Price

Make no mistake! . . . Phillips 66 Poly Gas is not an aviation gasoline.

But of all the motor fuels made for cars, trucks, and tractors—selling at regular price—Phillips 66 Poly Gas is the one whose volatility (or high test) most nearly and consistently approaches the U. S. Government specifications for aviation gasoline.

Remember, leading authorities say that volatility is the most important quality in gasoline:

Says a well-known scientist: "The more volatile fuel can be used with a leaner carburetor setting, and hence with less fuel consumption."

Says a professor of chemical engineering: "Increased volatility . . . is very effective in shortening the warm-up period . . . providing more uniform distribution of fuel to the different cylinders . . . reducing choking . . . and producing snappier acceleration and throttle response."

Says an editorial in an oil magazine: "Outstanding in the characteristics of improved motor fuel . . . for superior performance . . . is volatility."

Accurate laboratory research proves that your gasoline money buys more volatility in Phillips 66 Poly Gas. In fact, it contains nearly four times as much natural high test gasoline as the average motor fuel.

This extra volatility costs you nothing extra, because Phillips is the world's largest producer of natural high test gasoline. Why not try a tankful, at any Orange and Black 66 Shield?

UNABLE TO GET AROUND EXCEPT ON HER CRUTCHES

In That Condition When She Began KruGon's Use; Endured Crippling Pains In Her Left Knee; Soured, Bloated Feeling Made Eating A Miserable Experience For Her; Mrs. Garland Now Happy Over KruGon's Action

SUFFERERS! . . . all who have spent miserable years with those never ending aches and pains in the muscles and joints; indigestion, bloated soured gassy feeling; night risings, backaches; dizzy spells, biliousness from improper elimination, are in need of a remedy like KruGon that has given results that have surprised hundreds right here in Sedalia and vicinity. For example, read what Mrs. J. W. Garland, Route No 4, Windsor, Missouri (just southwest of Sedalia), a respected local lady, said recently in talking with the KruGon Man at the McFarland and Robinson Drug Co., 104 West Main Street, this city:

MRS. J. W. GARLAND

"I could see a considerable difference in my condition with the first few doses of this laxative-tonic formula," said Mrs. Garland, "My health problems began with a case of poor elimination which had allowed my system to become saturated with impurities. For the past ten years I had suffered dreadfully with acute attacks of indigestion. It seemed that everything I ate soured forming an abundance of gas which often would crowd me so I would become short of breath. At night I was unable to get much needed rest and sleep which left me weakened. Each day I felt drowsy, sluggish and had to force myself to do everything that I did. Then those sharp, stabbing pains settled in my left knee crippling me until I was forced to get around with the aid of crutches. I was in this condition when I began using KruGon, as it had been recommended to me by so many of my friends."

"Words could not explain my gratitude for finding such a commendable remedy as this KruGon." continued Mrs. Garland, "My system was soon given proper elimination and with those poisons removed from my body I began to show rapid improvement. Those dreadful attacks of indigestion, sour bloated feeling, bad taste in my mouth have been relieved and I feel entirely different than I have in many years. I can now get my rest and sleep at night, arise of a morning refreshed and feeling fine. I no longer have to diet either for my digestion has been regulated. I can go up and down stairs naturally now and really this KruGon has straightened me out . . . just when I had began to think I was not going to be able to get relief from my awful suffering."

The KruGon Man is daily meeting the local public at the McFarland and Robinson Drug Co., 104 West Main Street, this city, where he is introducting and explaining the action of this medical compound.

T. M. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

Test your knowledge of correct social usage by answering the following questions, then checking against the authoritative answers below:

1. If a girl is having supper at a dance with a group, is it all right to ask an extra man to join her?
2. Does the man or girl suggest sitting out a dance?
3. If a man has placed his arm in a position which is uncomfortable for his dancing partner, is it all right for her to ask him to change it?
4. Is it the responsibility of an usher at a dance to see that someone cuts in on a couple who seem to be "stuck"?
5. What other duties does he have?

What would you do if—

You are a young man dancing with a girl when intermission is announced—

(a) "Have you a date for intermission?"
(b) "May I spend the intermission with you?"
(c) "Can I find your date for you?"

Answers

1. Yes, but she must sit by the man who first asked her.
2. Girl.
3. Yes.
4. Yes.
5. Introduce strangers, and see that everyone has a good time.

Best "What Would You Say" solution—(b), or (c) if he knows she has definite plans.

Mother's Smart Little Girl Wears Simplest Clothes

By CAROL DAY

Simplicity, of course, is the rule for brief little ladies in the 4-to-10 size ranfie, but you can get lots of style in a simple little frock—if you have it made according to this new design, 8312. The skirt has a flare that ripples importantly when you hurry. The sleeves puff out like little balloons, and the waistline comes high!

Since it buttons from the square neckline to the hem, this dress is quick and easy to put on and it's very, very easy for mother to make.

For play and everyday, have 8312 in calico percale, gingham or (when cold weather comes on) in jersey or flannel. In taffeta, velvet, or dress-up cottons like organdy and dimity, it will be appropriate for parties and dinner at grandma's.

Pattern No. 8312 is designed for sizes 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. Size 6 requires 3 1-8 yards of 39 inch material for dress with panties; 4 5-8 yards of braid.

PATTERN BOOK, 32 pages of attractive designs for every size and every occasion, is now ready. Photographs show dresses made from these patterns being worn. a feature you will enjoy. Let the charming designs in this new book help you in your sewing. cents. Pattern or book alone—15 cents.

The Sports Roundup

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—Coach Curtis Parker is beating the heat down at Shreveport by having his centenary football squad report for practice at 6 a. m..... Al Schacht says: "I wish I had Lou Gehrig's money, Moe Berg's gall and my good times"..... Suppose you read where Bill Terry did a right-about-face and put the Giants back in the flag race.....Haw!.....Bill McKechnie usually addresses umpires with the prefix of Mister, but he must have said "Mr. So and So" the other day when he drew that $150 fine.

Looks like Hank Greenberg can kiss his chances of catching up with Babe Ruth's home run record good-bye.....The year he swatted 60 for a new record, the Bam got six of them during the first seven days of September .....Hank's record so far this month is zero.....Jimmy Crowley and Rex Enright, who used to be rommies at Notre Dame, will send their Fordham and South Carolina football teams against each other at the Polo Grounds Nov. 19.....West Virginia has a five-year football plan which is supposed to wind up in the Rose Bowl in 1940.

Sammy Baugh's contract with the Washington Redskins calls for $1 per year.....He is paid his record salary on a side agreement with the club owners.....Somebody ought to make a pass at Vince Barton of the Hickory (N. C.) team of the Carolina league who hit five homers in six times up against Kannapolis the other day. Is that a record?

Two Negro ball teams played a 14-inning 2-2 tie at Concord (N. C.) the other night and announced at midnight that the game had to be called on account of expenses.....One New York newspaper hints Bobby Riggs already has lined himself up a fat job with a Chicago sporting goods firm.....Here's an old familiar line: "Grimes sees Dodgers set for next year."....Ned Irish, the demon press agent, estimates 250,000 addicts have watched the eight pro-all-star football games this fall.....They've got Mickey Cochrane managing the 1939 Dodgers again, but forget it..... It's Beantown for Black Mike.

Southern California probably will take the longest jaunt of any Collitch hockey team when it travels approximately 3,500 miles to Montreal to play McGill University next December. .....It was just thirty years ago this month that Fred Merkle pulled that famous boner..... Fame isn't fleeting for old Babe Ruth... You'd be surprised at the votes he's getting for the breakfast food firm's all-star team.....Failing to land Babe either at first or in right field, his admirers now are trying to vote him into center.

VALENTINO BACK TO SCREEN IN "SON OF THE SHEIK"

Spurred by the current wave of revivals of the most outstanding films of the various major studios, Artcinema Associates, Inc., brings back "Son of the Sheik," the last picture filmed by Rudolph Valentino, widely acknowledged as the greatest screen lover of all time.

Based on the popular novel of the same name, by E. M. Hull, this colorful story, replete with breathless action and thrilling romance in the vast outdoors of the Sahara desert, will be the feature attraction at the Uptown theatre beginning Sunday for a three day engagement.

The romantic Italian actor has two distinct characterizations in "Son of the Sheik". He plays a stern, middle-aged Englishman who became head of a great Bedouin tribe, as well as Ahmed, his handsome, strong-willed, adventure-loving son. Supporting the star, in his dual role, are Vilma Banky, as the son's sweetheart—a dancer forced to become a slave girl by a marauding band of Moors—and Agnes Ayres, as the Sheik's wife.

"Son of the Sheik" is to be presented in its original silent version, without added dialogue, but it has been synchronized with dramatic sound effects and a complete musical score.

The associate feature will be one of the best of the Judge Hardy group, featuring Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Cecilia Parker and Fay Holden in "You Are Only Young Once"—the human story of the Hardy family—their excitement and enjoyment on their vacation.

Irving Berlin's Smash Production, "Alexander's Ragtime Band" full of Great Melodies and Moments.

Tyrone Power and Alice Faye . . . headstrong young sweethearts of Irving Berlin's 20th Century-Fox production, "Alexander's Ragtime Band," coming Sunday for five days to the Liberty Theatre.

Laurel and Hardy Bring Howling New Gags To Screen in "Block-Heads"

Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy again leave behind them a trail of hilarious disaster. In "Block-Heads," their new comedy today and tomorrow at the Liberty Theatre, the two funsters persevere in their well-meaning way, but fortunately for a world that likes to laugh, the obstacles are almost insurmountable.

In their uproarious antics in "Block-Heads" the comedians have the assistance of Patricia Ellis, Minna Gombell, Billy Gilbert and James Finlayson.

Irving Berlin's ALEXANDER'S RAGTIME BAND

A 20th Century-Fox picture featuring TYRONE POWER · ALICE FAYE · DON AMECHE
Ethel Merman · Jack Haley · Jean Hersholt

AT that awkward juncture, Charlie Dwyer joined them. And then Alexander understood the restraint in Stella's greeting. While he had been away with the Army in France, Stella, discouraged at his silence, had married Charlie. Charlie, too, had been in the Army, but his outfit had not been sent abroad. And Alexander found him re-established as a song writer, a great success.

THE shock of finding he had lost Stella was a severe one for Alexander. Somehow, all his plans had revolved around the idea of winning her back to him. Despite the pleas of the old band members, he took to drink, and listlessly refused to take any interest in planning a comeback for them and himself. Davey Lane (Jack Haley), his old drummer, brought a charming young singer, Jerry Allen (Ethel Merman) to take Stella's place. But he did not stir.

TO Stella, also, the meeting with Alexander had been a shock. In spite of herself, she found her old love for him reawakened. Charlie noticed her gloom, wisely guessed its cause. Finally, after a few months, he gently told her he knew what had happened, and suggested that she get a divorce and go back to Alexander. With tears of gratitude and compassion, she adopted the suggestion.

SHE found Alexander. But it was in the midst of a joyful celebration. He had finally snapped out of his depression, reorganized the band, and they were about to depart for a European tour. The new singer, Jerry, was responsible for his rehabilitation, and to Stella it appeared that the two were in love. Under the circumstances, she did not break to Alexander the news of her divorce. It had come too late, and her hopes for happiness with him were dashed. Stella abandoned her Broadway career. (To be continued)

'DIZZY' AND PAUL MAY MEET IN A PITCHING DUEL

Paul Back To Cardinals Slated To Oppose Pittsburgh

By The Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 9—Brothers have played with brothers and against brothers in major league baseball, but the possibility that "Me 'n' Paul" may meet in a pitching duel appeared today to be a fraternal "natural."

Paul Dean's return to the St. Louis Cardinals yesterday, after a year of nursing his arm in the minor leagues, brought the chance he may oppose Brother Dizzy in one of the Cards' six remaining games with the Chicago Cubs.

The two teams play in Chicago Sept. 24, 25 and 26 and wind up the season here Sept. 30, Oct. 1 and Oct. 2.

Trying to keep pace with his famous brother when Dizzy was at his peak may have been the reason Paul almost threw his arm out of joint. The brothers, then teammates, pitched the Cardinals to a world championship in 1934, each winning two games from the Detroit Tigers.

Paul's arm began cracking in 1936, when he won only five games and lost five, after going on the voluntary retired list twice, the younger right-hander returned to the minors with the hope he would be able to come back with his old effectiveness.

He was with Houston and Dallas of the Texas league this season, winning eight games and losing 16. However, eight of his defeats were by one run, and there was reason to believe he would fare better backed by the hard hitting Cardinals.

Paul once was the possessor of a fast ball that was speedier than his older brother's. Both he and Dizzy no longer rely on their ability to "fog 'em through."

Dizzy, beset all season with a variety of ailments, including a sore arm, such as dogged his brother, pitches with his head nowadays as much as he does with his arm. Texas league reports say Paul likewise has learned to mix 'em up.

Paul is slated to start against the Pittsburgh Pirates Sunday. When he pitched in batting practice yesterday, Manager Frankie Frisch said "Paul looks darned good."

FIFTY M. U. TIGERS TO START PRACTICE

COLUMBIA, Mo., Sept. 9—(AP)—Fifty gridmen — material for University of Missouri's "mystery team" of the Big Six — will don uniforms and trot out on Rollins field here tomorrow for the first practice of the 1938 season.

With the season opener against the University of Colorado less than a month away, Head Coach Don Faurot has prescribed two practices a day until classwork begins Sept. 16.

Fundamental drills and conditioning will monopolize the first week. The opening scrimmage is planned for a week from tomorrow.

Faurot may not be the most pessimistic person in the world at present, but he comes mighty close to it.

"Things don't look very promising right now," he sighed. "The backfield's going to be plenty green with only two letter men to use in it.

"Although we have a fair supply of veterans for the line, Maurice Kirk, B. D. Simon, Huston Betty, Clyde Nelson and Frank Heidel will be missing. And how I'm going to replace Hienie Mahley's running and kicking is another problem."

Commenting on the other Big Six teams, he said, "They all look tough, but Nebraska and Oklahoma are the standouts."

The Missouri team lost 18 veterans last year. Fourteen lettermen are returning. Colorado inaugurates the season here Oct. 1 and the Tigers will travel to Manhattan for their first conference game Oct. 8 against Kansas State.

RED SOX ADD THE LOUISVILLE CLUB

BOSTON, Sept. 9.—(AP)—The Boston Red Sox today added the Louisville club of the American Association to their rapidly expanding farm system with Donie Bush, former major league manager, and Frank McKinney, an Indianapolis banker, as part owners.

Eddie Collins, general manager of the Sox, said Bush, manager of the Minneapolis Millers and McKinney put up a considerable part of the unannounced purchase price with Tom Yawkey, millionaire owner of the Boston club.

Bush will complete the season with the Millers, then become manager of the Colonels.

All real estate, the club's franchise and all players, including Harold (Pee Wee) Reese, shortstop, for whom several major league clubs had offered sums ranging up to $40,000, were taken over by the new owners.

The purchase was made from the Knebelkamp interests.

BUDGE IN NO HURRY TO JOIN "PROS".

OAKMONT, Pa., Sept. 9.—(AP)—Ellsworth Vines, the tennis star who proved himself better than a dub at golf by qualifying for the national amateur, said today Don Budge is in no hurry about joining the pro net ranks.

"Budge is interested in those professional offers," he said during a luncheon intermission from the links, "but he feels there is no hurry about accepting them.

"I know Budge well, and he thinks if he can get $50,000 or $75,000 now he can still get it next year. The way amateur tennis is now he doesn't feel there is anybody that can beat him and I guess he's probably right.

"Bobby Riggs would come nearest to beating him, I expect, but that's not likely to happen just yet."

Vines, who qualified at Los Angeles for the national amateur, arrived yesterday.

Golf fascinates him as a means of relaxation.

"In tennis," he explained, "you have certain definite strokes and you turn your racquet this way (with gestures) if you want backspin or that way (more guestures) if you want topspin. But in golf there are as many strokes as there are players and a club for every different shot. I guess it's the difference in the two sports which attracts me."

WOULD WAGER $25,000 ON RACE

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 9.—(AP)—Commodore Edward Koenig, owner of the steamer, "The City of St. Louis," is now willing to wager $25,000 that his boat could beat California's "Delta Queen" in a proposed race up the Mississippi river from New Orleans next spring. Previously he offered $10,000.

W. D. Dwyer, president of the Sacramento River Lines, owners of the "Delta Queen," promised "very serious consideration" to the increased wager.

If the race is held, the boats will attempt to lower the 90-hour, 20-minute record made by the "Robert E. Lee" more than 60 years ago.

CHECK ON AGES OF RIVAL PLAYERS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9—(AP)—Census bureau officials are getting ready for their little-known part in the making and breaking of football teams.

"The government cuts down a lot of backs and takes many a tackler out of the play," said Dr. D. T. Murphy today.

The reason? Many states have age limits for players, but birth records are not always available at home.

"From this weekend right on through the football season," explained Dr. Murphy, "the census bureau is called upon to furnish the ages of dozens upon dozens of players."

The government, through the decennial census, has the birth date of every person in the United States who is old enough to play football.

Most requests come from the coaches seeking information about rival teams, Dr. Murphy said, adding that he gets telegraphed requests in the morning for information needed before game time."

Where it's reasonably possible, the bureau digs into its files, fights for dear old eligibility and telegraphs the data back for the kickoff—collect, of course.

SUDETENS STAGE A DEMONSTRATION NEAR TO BORDER

Steps To Prevent Disorders At Funeral of Man Killed

By ALVIN J. STEINKOPF

PRAGUE, Sept. 9—(AP)—Several thouand Sudeten German, shouting Nazi slogans, demonstrated for an hour today in front of the police station at Jaegehndorf, near Czechoslovakia's German and Polish borders.

The clamor added to the pressure on the harried government from both sides.

Premier Milan Hodza received a flood of telegrams from Czechoslovaks who oppose more concessions to the autonomy-demanding Sudeten German minority.

The demonstrations at Jaegerndorf obtained permission to make a Sudeten German party affair tomorrow of the funeral of Alfred Knoll.

Knoll, a minor Sudeten German functionary, was killed when he fell from a railroad train while in custody of a military guard. He had been charged with espionage and Sudeten Germans have demanded an inquiry into his death, intimating he was killed after a scuffle with the officers.

Fearing violence, officials have refused permission for the funeral to be held under Sudeten German auspices.

A crowd quickly gathered at the Jaegerndorf police headquarters when this earlier refusal became known, angrily shouting "Hail Victory!" And "One people! One state!"

Officials were persuaded by a Sudeten German committee to grant a permit for marching and music at the funeral and the crowd dispersed.

Worried authorities, however, began preparations to prevent disorders tomorrow.

Wear Mourning Bands

In Prague Sudeten German deputies Ernst Kundi and Alfred Rosche wore mourning bands on their arms in tribute to Knoll.

They visited Hodza to discuss with him an investigation of a clash between Sudeten Germans and police at Maehrisch-Ostrau, in the same region as Jaegerndorf in which a Sudeten German deputy was struck. The incident caused suspension of the critical autonomy negotiations between the government and the Germanic minority.

Most of the appeals repeated the new Czech slogan: "Not one millimeter farther!" Many of them were from groups of citizens and political organizations.

The messages, a German spokesman said, indicated a stiffening of Czechoslovak opinion outside the regions inhabited by the 3,500,000 Sudeten Germans whom Adolf Hitler supports in their demands for self-government.

Accept "no solution which endangers the soverignty, integrity or unity of the state or which in the slightest degree diminishes the ability of the republic to defend itself," urged a resolution adopted by the executive committee of the national union, an intensely nationalist party.

The Communist party, the third largest in Czechoslovakia but without any representation in the cabinet, sponsored a mass meeting in downtown Prague tonight to protest against some concessions held out to the Sudeten Germans.

JUDGE WILLIAM F. FRANK DIES OF HEART ATTACK

the Kansas City Court of appeals on March 7, 1927 for a two-year term.

In his supreme court campaign 10 years ago the judge received 739,930 votes to 719,508 for his Democratic opponent.

In last month's primary, when he was unopposed, Judge Frank polled 220,390 votes against the more than 515,000 Democratic votes that went to Clark.

Outstanding Decisions

Judge Frank served as chief justice of the supreme court from May, 1934, to October, 1935.

Two of the oustanding decisions in Missouri's famous fire insurance rate litigation which began in 1922 were the work of Judge Frank.

He wrote the opinion handed down Dec. 9, 1937, which voided the 80-20 compromise negotiated with 74 insurance companies in the state's phase of the 16 2-3 per cent rate increase case by R. E. O'Malley, former superintendent of insurance, and which ordered all the impounded $1,750,000 returned to the policy holders.

Five years earlier, the attempt by insurance companies to block restitution of funds impounded in the 10 per cent case was overruled in an opinion by Judge Frank denying them a writ of prohibition.

Among his other outstanding opinions was one denying Negro students the right to enter the University of Missouri.

He was married August 4, 1908, to Miss Bessie M. Coombs. They had two children—William C. and Mary Elizabeth.

Both children were graduated by the University of Missouri and each followed one of the father's vocations. The son practiced law at Kirksville and the daughter taught in the schools there.

Judge Frank drove the 250-mile round trip to Kirksville from Jefferson City to spend each week-end with his family during all his years on the high court.

BOMB DAMAGES BUSINESS HOUSES

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 9.—A bomb damaged three Southside business houses early today—only 12 hours after a special grand jury blamed "so-called labor organizers" for more than 500 window smashings and nine bomb explosions here since January 1.

The grand jury returned 13 secret indictments naming 50 persons it charged had preyed upon "honest union labor" and exploited the employer, resorting to price-fixing and intimidation.

Police said the bomb, made either of dynamite or black powder, shattered a rear door and twisted a heavy iron grillwork at the Blaylock pharmacy and broke windows in two adjoining stores. No one was injured.

Police estimated damage at the pharmacy at $50.

As sheriff's deputies were given warrants today for the arrests of persons indicted yesterday by the grand jury, two labor attorneys, Clif Langsdale and Roy W. Rucker, appeared before county authorities with volunteered assurances that if any of their clients were named they would produce them without the necessity of arrests.

STRIKE OF COAL MINERS CONTINUES

NOVINGER, Mo., Sept. 9.—(AP)—A strike of 400 to 500 Adair County coal miners continued today. A peace parley between strike representatives and operators ended last night without a settlement and no future meetings of the two groups were arranged.

Sam Phillips, representative of the United Mine Workers of America, said the strike was called yesterday in an effort to get higher wages than the prevailing county scale of $2 to $3.20 a day. He said the union was not asking the operators to meet its regular scale of $5 a day.

The UMWA has no contract in this area.

SELLS GRAND CHAMPION HOG AT 75 CENTS POUND

LEADERS MEET TO STUDY THE CZECH CRISIS

Sir Nevile Henderson And Goering Discuss Minority Problem

NURNBERG, Germany, Sept. 9.—(AP)—The British ambassador to Germany, Sir Nevile Henderson, spent most of last afternoon conferring with Field Marshall Hermann Wilhelm Goering, No. 2 Nazi, British embassy sources disclosed tonight.

Greatest significance was attached to the field marshal's intimate talk with Henderson at this critical juncture of the German - Czechoslovak conflict over automonomy rights of the Sudeten German minority in Czechoslovakia.

Informed political observers know Goering usually figures in decisive moments of Nazi affairs as Hitler's most trusted lieutenant.

Goering had told even his own adjutants he intended to go from the Nazi congress at Nurnberg to Berlin. But instead he went to his Bavarian mountain retreat and received the British ambassador.

Though negotiations here over the Czechoslovak question have reached the extreme secrecy stage it was learned Hendrson has an appointment tomorrow to see Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop.

It was reported unofficially the Sudeten leader, Konrad Henlein, had talked with Hitler this afternoon after returning from an overnight trip to Czechoslovakia.

Henlein had hurried home after receiving reports an alleged whipping of a Sudeten German deputy by a Czech policeman had caused a rupture of the negotiations between the Czechoslovak government and the Sudeten Germans.

Hitler was understood to have instructed the minority leaders in the neighboring republic to resume their talks to convince the world he was leaving nothing undone to find a peaceful solution of the dispute and to enable him to press upon the British to demand maximum concessions from Prague for the Germanic minority.

In Prague, however, the Sudeten party issued a statement tonight accusing the Czechoslovak government of being unable to prevent mistreatment of political prisoners and intimating the government lacks effective authority.

PRESIDENT WILL GO TO BEDSIDE OF SON IN HOSPITAL

Operation At Rochester On Monday For James Roosevelt

HYDE PARK, Sept. 9.—(AP)—President Roosevelt scheduled two last-minute conferences today before speeding to the bedside of his son, James, who will undergo an operation Monday at the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn.

The summer White House announced suddenly last night that Mr. Roosevelt would entrain tonight for Rochester, to be present during the gastric operation Monday. Mrs. Roosevelt already is in Rochester. and James wife, Betsy, was scheduled to arrive there today.

The announcement that Mr. Roosevelt would leave Hyde Park came unexpectedly from Marvin McIntyre, White House secretary. He declined comment on James condition, saying he knew nothing more than what had been reported in newspapers.

News reports from Rochester have said that James' gastric trouble was common in persons of an energetic temperament and that previous treatments had failed to remedy it. An operation was decided upon earlier this week and James now is going preoperative treatment.

Mr. Roosevelt will travel through Chicago to Rochester, but no stop was scheduled in the Illinois metropolis.

There was some speculation that the president might travel on through Minnesota and Wisconsin if James recuperates quickly.

The President had been in constant touch with James and Mrs. Roosevelt since they arrived at Rochester. It was assumed the President decided to make the trip to Minnesota on the basis of reports from the two members of his family and the doctors at Mayo's.

James, who serves as secretary and confidential adviser to his father, is regarded in White House circles as a hard worker.

Dietary Treatment

ROCHESTER, Minn., Sept. 9.—(AP)—Mayo Clinic physicians today continued dietary treatment for James Roosevelt, son the President, preparatory to a stomach operation Monday.

The operation, described as "serious" but not necessarily indicative of a critical condition, will be for removal of a gastric ulcer.

Mrs. James Roosevelt arrived by train today. At the bedside of her husband she joined Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, who came here with her son and was ready to return east Wednesday night when the operation was decided upon.

James condition was described as "excellent." A rigid diet was imposed to allow "recent acute manifestations to subside," the clinic announced.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt has made frequent trips to St. Mary's hospital where James was confined Thursday. At first shocked and anxious, she evinced cheerfulness yesterday.

SALARIES OF ACE MOVIE DIRECTORS

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 9.—Salaries of Hollywood's ace directors were of public record today—introduced at their own behest in an effort to win the right to bargain collectively with motion picture studios under the Wagner Act.

John Ford topped the list with $6,250 a week. Ernest Lubitsch, before leaving Paramount, received $5,000. Others include Roy Del Ruth, $4,873; Al Santel, $4,000; Wesley Ruggles, $4,025; Frank Lloyd, $3,500; William Seiter, $3,250; David Butler, $3,000; Irving Cummings, $2,500; Sidney Lanfield, $2,250; Walter Lang, $2,000; George Marshall, $1,500.

Directors seek to show that they and their assistants are "salaried employes" rather than "contract workers" as the studios contend.

G. O. P. NOMINEES FOR SENATE HAVE A $35,000 CHEST

Making Strong Effort In Nine States To Elect Republicans

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9—(AP)—Republican nominees for the senate have a campaign chest balance of more than $35,000 to spend on the November election, a report to the clerk of the house revealed today.

Robert V. Fleming, treasurer of the Republican senatorial campaign committee, said committee funds already had gone into nine states in an effort to elect Republican senators this fall. The states are Pennsylvania, Iowa, Oregon, North Dakota, South Dakota, Indiana, Kansas, Colorado and Delaware.

The committee has received $57,250 since the start of this year and spent $21,219 to September 1. The report showed three Republican senate nominees had each received $3,000 to aid their campaigns. They were Senators James J. Davis in Pennsylvania; former Senator L. J. Dickinson in Iowa, and Rufus Holman in Oregon.

Three other Republican senate entries have each received $2,000, Senator Gerald P. Nye in North Dakota; Chan Gurney in South Dakota, and Raymond E. Willis, Indiana.

The committee listed $1,000 payments for Clyde M. Reed in Kansas, and Archibald Lee in Colorado.

All expenditures were in $1,000 units.

In addition to those for Holman in Oregon, the committee said $1,000 had been sent to Senator Charles L. McNary and $250 to Fred W. Means, both of Salem, Ore., for Republican organization work.

The committee listed $200 for similar purposes in Delaware.

The Republican group said its $18,569 in receipts since June came from the Republican National committee except for three individual contributors. These were E. T. Weir, Pittsburgh, Pa., $4,000; Nelson A. Rockefeller, New York City $1,250; and Seward Prosser, New York City $1,000.

STAND PAT ON DEMANDS FOR CUT

CHICAGO, Sept. 9—(AP)—Railroad management still stood pat today on demands for a general wage cut, despite a strike ballot being taken among the workers.

H. A. Enochs, chairman of the carriers' joint conference committee, said the wage scale was out of proportion with income "and the roads just don't have the money to continue."

Enochs' committee is preparing its case for presentation to a fact finding committee, in event the workers vote to strike. The railway labor law provides that an emergency committee appointed by the president must study the issues and make recommendations before a strike can be called on a wage cut effected. When efforts to mediate the dispute failed recently, officers of the nineteen unions involved authorized the taking of a strike vote.

Enochs said the committee has found no alternative to the 15 per cent wage cut proposal.

Asked if he believed the recent upturn in freight volume might change the picture, he said:

"It's my personal belief that this relief is not going to be so marked as some people believe."

BLUEBIRDS ARE 'DEATH TO HOPPERS'

Bluebirds are far superior to poison mash for exterminating grasshoppers Mr. and Mrs. William Housel, 1500 West Fourth street have learned from experience, when they "adopted" Bob and Betty, two little fledglings, brought to their home by Verne Gould of Sixteenth street and Moniteau avenue.

The birds when they were not more than two weeks old were consuming from 100 to 125 grasshoppers a day.

The birds were hatched in a box at the Gould home, and something happened to the old birds that they did not return to the nest. The little birds cried and Mr. Gould had someone keep watch for a whole day. Realizing that the old birds were not returning and that the little birds must be taken care of, he took them to the Housel home, where they were made welcome.

The little things were not old enough to know how to eat and Mrs. Housel, who had read that butterflies and grasshoppers were proper food, fed them by hand. The first few days they were fed often, then a little longer time was allowed to lapse between the meals and now, six weeks later, the birds return occasionally, probably remembering the fine meals they had in their early days.

WPA WORKERS NOT GET ELECTION PAY

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 9—(AP)—A hundred and fifty emergency election officials— drafted to fill St. Louis vacancies during the recent primary—cannot claim pay for their work, the attorney general's office ruled today.

The St. Louis election board decided this year that WPA workers could not serve as precinct officials because they were government employes. That fact, "together with the usual run of vacancies," made necessary the employment of 150 emergency workers.

The attorney general's opinion, asked by the St. Louis election board, said "temporary appointees selected by judges or the clerk of an election precinct in the city of St. Louis to fill . . . the place of an absent judge or clerk . . . is not entitled to compensation for such temporary work."

The Assembly at Mizpah

After Samuel had gone up and down throughout the promised land pointing to the sins of Israel, and after Israel had suffered a crushing defeat by the Philistines, he called the people to meet in a great assembly at Mizpah for the simple reason that in such a company there is the possibility of a more lasting impression, the creation of a greater earnestness; an inspiration which comes from thousands of people who believe alike, and hope alike, looking into each other's faces.

That is why Christians gather together in church every Sunday. Why not accept the invitation, and COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?

Creamed Comments On S.S. Lesson

Saul: Moral Failure. I Samuel 10:17-25; 15:10-23; 28:3-25; 31:3-6 for Sunday, September 11, 1938.

No man in all the Bible started out with more promise than Saul, and none ended in such ignominious failure. Samuel's sons were a failure as judges. The surrounding nations had kings. For these two reasons, Israel wanted a king.

Vs. 21-23. "When he had caused the tribe of Benjamin to come near by their families, the family of Matri was taken, and Saul, the son of Kish was taken. And when they sought him, he could not be found." What Israel wanted was national independence that depended on military resources and not upon God. Although their plan was to reject God as immediate and absolute ruler, he allowed them as he does us, the freedom of choice. Saul had the qualities of a king, a man of character, tall of stature and humble since he could not be found. "He "hid himself among the stuff," that is, he concealed himself behind the baggage. It is a great honor to be called of God even to be his child.

V. 24. "And Samuel said to all the people, See ye him whom the Lord hath chosen, that there is none like him among all the people? And all the people shouted, God save the king." God gave Saul every possible opportunity. He gave him a new heart and promised to go with him, on condition that he absolutely obey him. This condition stands today for any who would be known as God's men. The people were with Saul in his coronation. "God save the king," a phrase now used in the coronation of a British king.

V. 25. "Then Samuel told the people the manner of the kingdom and wrote it in a book, and laid it up before the Lord. And Samuel sent all the people away, every man to his house." Samuel drafted a constitution which would safeguard the liberties of the people. Our form of government is closely allied to God's plan. A true democracy gives Christianity its best chance.

V. 20. "And Saul said unto Samuel, Yea, I have obeyed the voice of the Lord, and have gone the way which the Lord hath sent me, and have brought Agag, the king of Amalek, and have utterly destroyed the Amalekites." Saul's success caused him to lose his head. He took credit to himself. He saw a chance for private gain. He tried to justify himself in formal worship.

V. 21. "But the people took of the spoil, sheep and oxen, the chief of the things which should have been utterly destroyed, to sacrifice unto the Lord thy God in Gilgal." Saul tries to shift the blame for his disobedience, but his excuse is of no avail. Our common excuse is "they did it." Saul tried to pay a compliment to himself in the claim that the best of the flocks were to be dedicated to the Lord. Worship is a failure when the worshippers are not true-hearted, wholehearted.

V. 22. "And Samuel said, Hath the Lord as great delight in burnt offerings and sacrifices, as in obeying the voice of the Lord? Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams." Disobedience can never be made a virtue even though attended by thousands of sacrifices.

V. 23. "For rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft, and stubbornness is as iniquity and idolatry. Because thou hast rejected the word of the Lord, he hath also rejected thee from being king. Disobedience and rebellion are on a par with heinous sins. "Just this once won't hurt" is the entering wedge to a second, a third and than later more easily disregard of the Christ way of living. So an unconscious attitude of rebellion follows.

V. 24. "And the battle went sore against Saul, and the archers hit him; and he was sore wounded of the archers." In Saul's last days he had to face war with the Philistines and having lost out with God, he did not have divine assistance. Moral defeat was followed by complete failure of all of life.

V. 25. "Saul took a sword and fell upon it." After Saul lost his soul, he lost his mind, as only an insane man will take his own life. Any habit that shortens life, impairs health, has in it elements of suicide and therefore such habits are to be discredited.

V. 26. "And when his armour bearer saw that Saul was dead, he likewise fell upon his sword, and died with him." The influence of a bad hibit or even of one impressive act affects others for good or for bad. We are responsible for an example that influences others. Saul's three sons did as their father did, took their own lives by one stroke of the sword.

Discussion Questions on S.S. Lesson

1. What weakness of character brought Saul to ruin
2. Why did Saul's repeated confession that he had sinned not constitute real repentance?
3. What are the steps to moral defeat?
4. Why is partial obedience to God dangerous?
5. What is the chief lesson we should learn from Saul's failures?

Clericus says, "What counts is not how a man's career begins, but how it ends. Matthew began a publican and ended an apostle. Judas began an apostle and ended a trator. The world remembers men not by what they started out to be, but by what they became."

Lesson Prayer: "We would watch the little things that enter into obedience to God that there be no disobedience in the least thing allowed to become a habit."

World Religious News

Church authorities, including the Bishop of London, have approved an experimental "venture in Church Union" in which a Church of England communion service is held in a London Congregational church with the sermon preached by a Baptist minister.

The services conducted at the King's Weigh House Church of London, are arranged by Anglican and Free Church ministers, the prayers are taken by either or both, and the pulpit is occupied by the several ministers.

The International Good Will Congress will be held in the Palace hotel in San Francisco, California, November 6-11, 1938. It is being promoted and will be under the auspices of the World Alliance for International Friendship Through the Churches (the American Council, the Church Peace Union and the San Francisco Peace Council). Some of the topics to be discussed are: "America's Responsibility in the Pacific," "What Constitutes National Security?" "World Cooperation or Coercion," "A Practical Peace Program for the Church and Religious Organization."

This will be the twenty-third annual meeting of the congress.

The churches of Oregon City, Oregon, run an independent bus line on Sundays to bring rural parishioners to church. Each cooperating church pays forty-eight cents for each passenger carried. Especially during the winter months this service has proved a great boon to the city churches.

Heavy iron chains were once drawn across London highways on Sundays to stop all traffic noise in the vicinity of churches. One small street near St. Paul's Cathedral is still called Paul's Chain.

A world conference of Christian youth is planned for the summer of 1939. It will be sponsored by the joint Youth Commission of the Universal Christian Council for Life and Work and the International Committee of World Alliance for International Friendship Through the Churches.

Church Forum

In what definite ways may the protestant church make needed and definite improvement?

Roger Babson, the retiring moderator of the Congregational-Christian denomination gave some pertinent suggestions on improving the church. Some of these suggestions are:

1. "Once a member always a member," is not a good policy. There is a demand for an annual reaffirmation.
2. The standards of the church should be such as not to allow hypocrisy.
3. Sunday school teachers ought to be more serious and their teachings ought to be applicable to the daily needs of those taught.
4. There is need for more sane returns of evangelistic revivals rather than to unduly emphasize "intellectual religion."
5. There is a demand for the spirit of real stewardship within the church.
6. It is a mistake to make overhead programs too binding on local churches.
7. There ought to be a greater interest in the welfare of the members of the church. Much might be done to see to it that their own church families find employment.

Home Education

Friendship and Home

The home that stands the test of time is started in true friendships having similar tastes and ideals. Time needs to be given to make sure that tastes and ideals are similar for an attempt to live as husband and wife when they are different, will result in failure and defeat.

The joy of friendship and the growing tie that binds two young lives together is the developing of each others' tastes and ideals into a common mold which makes for compatibility and united effort in all endeavors.

Marriage vows are but the public recognition of facts that are fundamental, facts that have been discovered as to the inner life, its likes and dislikes and its throbbing purposes. In these inner throbbings of soul, friendship are cemented by the tie of unbounded love that anchors the home which stands against the storms of life.

The Better Way

Applying Our Knowledge

I know we could have world peace if only we understood how to dramatize it for the heart as the R. O. T. C. understands how to dramatize war to the eye.

I know we could get honesty in politics if only we could make it popular for a man to be as square in the public service as he is when he sells a set of instruments to a surgeon.

I know we could enjoy all the freedoms of the Bill of Rights if only we were willing that all men should have them—especially the men whose ideas we most dislike.

I know we could have real education in our schools if only we cared as much about keeping the mind of the child growing as we do about what we insist on stuffing into it.

And I know we could have a Christian America tomorrow if only we would make even our present imperfect Sunday habits come alive on Monday.

I know all that; and so do you. So what?

RELATION OF TEMPERATURES OUTDOORS AND INDOORS DECIDES HOME COMFORT

(This is the second of three articles by Dr. Fishbein in which he discusses the relation between housing and health.)

In connection with new improvements of housing throughout the nation, special attention is now being given to methods of heating and ventilating the places in which we live.

As has been pointed out by Dr. C. C. Yaglou of the Department of Industrial Hygiene in the School of Public Health of Harvard University, we heat our homes not in order to warm up the occupants but rather to prevent or control the rate of loss of heat from the bodies of the occupants. Thus we produce a condition of comfort at the lowest possible temperature of the air that will prevent contrast of the air in the room with that outside.

We are concerned not only, then, with the heating system, which is just one-half the problem, but also with the kind of building materials that make up the walls, floor, and the ceiling. Our feeling of warmth depends not only on the temperature of the air but also on the temperature of the surfaces of the room in which we happen to be—surfaces which take up heat from the body if they happen to be much colder than the body itself.

* * *

Dr. Yaglou points out that in a home that is properly insulated the temperature of the walls exposed is just a few degrees below the temperature of the air.

Comfortable conditions, therefore, can be had with air temperature between 69 degrees F. and 73 degrees F. in the very coldest weather. If, however, a home is poorly built, it may be uncomfortable even with the temperature at 75 degrees F., or even at 80 degrees F. in cold weather.

Not only do the cold walls and windows produce excessive radiation of heat from the human body but they also chill the air and allow much leakage of outside air through cracks and crevices. The cold air will fall to the floor and chill the feet, while the warm air is pushed up by natural processes to the ceiling.

For this reason suitable insulation of the walls, windows, and doors will not only improve the comfort of a room, but permit a great reduction in the size of the heating equipment that is necessary to make the house comfortable.

Dr. Yaglou believes that the usual variations of humidity in homes during the heating season are relatively unimportant for comfort. There seems to be no evidence that artificial humidification is absolutely necessary for health, except in rare cases.

If, however, a new home is being constructed, it becomes a simple matter to arrange for artificial humidification in connection with the heating equipment.

• RAISING A FAMILY

School Now Gives the Child An Adult Mentality Early, But Immature Emotions.

There is no question about the improvement of school systems everywhere, both public and private. Both have explored new ways to reach the child's best interests, with very few exceptions, and today's mother, I hope, recognizes the fact that her children have opportunities far beyond anything dreamed of 20 years ago.

I am, however, a great rooter for the old-time school. I believe there was more appreciation, for one thing, and then I look back on its arbitrary methods a little kindly. Children learned facts for the most part, but oh, how these facts stuck! Some way or other it was borne in on each child that knowledge was a very precious thing. It was not compulsory education up to 16 or 18.

Learned Slowly Then

To go back through the years. I remember well that I was still reading pages haltingly and fearfully about ladies with fine fans and bunnies with cotton tails, when I was in the third grade. Recently a boy under seven read to me from the newspaper astonishingly well.

Here is the difference. Today's schools realize that mental powers are stimulated by variety and they open wider fields to a child's view. Their curriculum is twice as interesting as before. The approach to study takes into consideration child nature and the likes and dislikes of children. Indeed, although I believe the interest-motive somewhat overdone at times, it has taken the bogey man out of school.

And here I must give credit to the writers of children's books. No wonder children know so much these days, what with school, supplementary reading, the radio and the movies. These are all "school," you see. We think of school too often as walls and desks.

But There's a Flaw

There is possibly no other country where general education may be picked up so freely as it is here. It is in the air. But now for the flaw that mars the picture a little. Today's children are more mature mentally, but there is greater emotional immaturity and indifference. The teen-agers are often less adult, in spite of their sophistication, than their ancestors. But comparisons are, of course, unfair. Times have changed. Yet I cannot help wondering where further "progress" will head us with so much to appreciate and such questionable appreciation.

When a Party "Purged" A President

FIGHTING solon of the Virginia Legislature and of both the House of Representatives and the Senate, John Tyler was elected vice president of the United States with popular frontiersman William Henry Harrison as President. But exactly one month after inauguration Tyler found himself President, when Harrison died suddenly on April 4, 1841.

So was launched one of the rarest presidential careers on record, a career which was to see Tyler "purged" at last by his own party. This is the story:

As far back as Jackson's term, Tyler had opposed the general's course in many matters, notably the United States Bank. Later, as senator, he opposed nullification but condemned Jackson's nullification program. In 1834 he made a report sharply censuring Jackson for removing deposits from the United States Bank. And then he became President and faced the bank issue once more. Promptly Tyler vetoed the bill to recharter the institution.

Congress remodified the measure next, partly at Tyler's suggestion, passed it once more. And again Tyler vetoed it. Likewise he killed the measure to revise the tariff. Thereupon all of the members of his cabinet resigned, except Webster. He remained only long enough to conclude the Webster-Ashburton treaty. Meanwhile, the Whigs countered with a daring "purge" of their own leader and President. A public address was issued declaring that "all political connection with them and John Tyler was at end from that day henceforth."

Tyler retired in 1845. He is shown here on a stamp of the new U. S. regular series, enlarged.

ANSWER: Rainbows can occur only in the morning or afternoon . . . never at midday . . . for the sun must be rather low in order to set the stage for this phenomenon. Sunlight enters the falling raindrops, is refracted, then totally deflected . . . and each refraction separates its spectral colors.

SINKING SPELL ON STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(AP)—European war news took the principal blame today for another sinking spell in the stock market.

Traders scampered to neutral territory early in the session as the German-Czech controversy apparently became more complicated.

The list drifted downward in the morning's proceedings, and a fair-sized selling wave knocked down pivotal motors, steels and industrial specialties near midday for losses running to 3 or more points.

There was a subsequent mild comeback, but volume dwindled substantially on the recovery and, in the closing hour, the ticker tape idled the greater part of the time. Transfers approximated 700,000 shares.

Business developments continued more hopeful than otherwise, although skeptics were to be found in Wall Street who felt that too much stress might have been placed on possibilities of an exceptional fall upturn. European unsettlement, it was also thought, might upset the domestic economic advance as well as give the stock market the shivers.

ANSWER TO CRANIUM CRACKER

Question on Comic Page

At the extreme right place the figure 42, with an equals sign before it.

Place the final six before the equals sign.

You know, now that the only way to make six into 42 is to multiply it by seven, so place "times" before the six.

You must make the seven into a six now, so before the "times 6" place "plus six." That leaves 1 left to make into sixes. You know that six divided by six equals 1, so you place at the beginning of the series "6 divided by 6."

The whole now reads "6 divided by 6 plus 6 times 6 equals 42."

ITALY IS READY FOR EVENTUALITIES

ROME, Sept. 9.—Italy stood ready today "for any eventualities" as she watched allied Germany's maneuvers on behalf of the Sudeten German minority in Czechoslovakia.

With the whole Fascist state organized along semi-military lines, special mobilization is not needed to be prepared for action.

The controlled press displayed prominently in the authoritative informatione diplomatica that the Italian "internal mechanism" guaranteed the country's readiness.

The hope was expressed in Fascist circles that Czechoslovakia would grant autonomy to the Sudeten Germans and avoid armed conflict.

How far Italy would go with Germany in case of a showdown, however, was not made any more clear than in the past. The semi-official statement limited itself to declaring Italy's moral support for the Sudeten German demands and reaffirming the diplomatic solidarity of the Rome-Berlin axis.

SOME OF STIPULATIONS UNDER THE "FAIR LABOR STANDARDS ACT"

(This is the concluding article of a series on questions people are asking concerning the new fair labor standards law, effective October 24, together with the best available answers at this time. Previous articles have discussed the wages, hours and child labor aspects of the law and the subject of exemptions.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—Will the law require a large body of administrative employes, inspectors and agents?

Most of the thousands who are applying for jobs under the administrator will be disappointed. While he is empowered to appoint such civil service employes as he deems necessary, he has said there will be no army of agents. He will use existing regional, local and other agencies whenever possible. Likewise he will depend largely upon the industries affected to do their own policing, assuming that the penalties for violation and the self interest of persons aggrieved by suspected violations, who may bring suit, will be powerful incentives to strict observance.

Will not employes hesitate to inform of violations and bring suit lest they jeopardize their jobs?

The act makes it unlawful to discharge an employe or discriminate against him because he has filed complaint, instituted proceedings, testified against his employer or served on one of the industry committees.

Will the administrator investigate asserted violations, and issue orders respecting compliance?

Wide Powers of Inquiry

He has wide powers to investigate, gather data and require the keeping of suitable records. He may also issue orders containing such terms and conditions as he may find necessary. He has power to compel attendance of witnesses at hearings and to require the production of books, papers and documents.

Can an aggrieved employer obtain a court review of an order of the administrator concerning wages and hours?

Yes, by asking a circuit court of appeals to set aside the grievous order. The law provides procedure under which the court calls on the administrator for pertinent records in the case, reviews questions of law, inspects the evidence on which facts are determined and decides whether additional evidence is material. Providing the complaining employer has availed himself properly of his opportunities to present his full case to the administrator, the court may order further hearings before the administrator looking toward new findings or recommendations. Its decree thereafter is final, subject to the possibility of supreme court review.

If such an aggrieved person takes his case to the courts, does that automatically stay the administrator's order until the court decides?

No; and the law provides the court shall not grant any stay unless the person complaining gives satisfactory surety for payments to employes affected by the order in question in case it should be upheld by the court.

Is the procedure the same with respect to the child labor provisions?

It is similar, but the administrator, in such cases, is the chief of the children's bureau in the department of labor.

If a person or industry should carry an appeal to the supreme court and win his case, does that destroy the whole law?

"Separability" Clause

The law contains the "separability" clause, which provides that if its application to one person or circumstance happens to be held invalid, its application to other persons or circumstances shall not be affected. The whole law would fall only if the supreme court should decide that congress founded the law upon an incorrect assumption of power, in which case no order under the act would be enforceable.

Is there any distinction made between individuals and corporations in respect to enforcement of this law?

The act provides that a "person" affected by this law may be an individual, a partnership, association, corporation, business trust, legal representative or any organized group of persons. It also provides that an "employer" may be any person acting directly or indirectly in the interest of an employer in relation to an employe.

Are public employes affected by the law?

No. The term "employer" does not include the United States or any state or political subdivision of a state.

To whom shall letters concerning the application of the law be addressed?

If the questions concern wages and hours, to Elmer F. Andrews, administrator, wages and hours division, department of labor, Washington, D. C. If it concerns child labor, to Miss Katharine Lenroot, chief of the childrens' bureau, department of labor, Washington.

Are such letters welcomed?

Yes, because they are being studied by the administrators in their effort to answer as quickly as possible the pertinent questions concerning the law. This may be done by public statements and clarifying regulations, however, not necessarily by direct reply.

ENGINEER KILLED IN TRAIN WRECK

HUDSON, Wis., Sept. 9.—The westbound mail-passenger train of the Chicago and Northwestern Line was wrecked near here today, killing the engineer and injuring several passengers.

The wreck was caused by a washout, result of a torrential rain that fell here beginning last night.

The train was bound from Chicago to the twin cities and was due about 8 a. m.

The dead engineer was August Reick. At least three persons were hurt, but first reports did not say how seriously.

The train was running late because of rough weather and plowed into the washout at high speed, according to first reports. The engine rolled on to the weakened track and went over in the ditch. The fireman jumped but the engineer was trapped in the cab and killed.

Several coaches were strewn about the right of way.

The train left Chicago shortly before midnight. About half way on its run, it began encountering unfavorable weather.

ASKS SUDETENS RESUME TALKS IN MINORITY CRISIS

Instructions From Hitler In Expressing Peace Desire

ORDERS FOLLOWERS TO REMAIN CALM

German Efforts To Get British To Act On Problem Quickly

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

NURNBERG, Germany, Sept. 8—(AP)—Adolf Hitler, who yesterday ordered Sudeten Germans to discontinue their negotiations for selfrule with the Czechoslovak government, today instructed the minority leaders to resume the talks.

The reason for this change, it was said, was the desire of the chancellor and self-styled protector of Sudeten Germans to convince the world he was leaving nothing undone to find a peaceful solution to the Czech-German crisis.

Informed quarters said "with this additional evidence of a conciliatory spirit to the Sudeten Germans' credit," Hitler could "all the more press upon the British to demand maximum concessions from the Czechoslovak administration."

German efforts will now be concentrated upon getting the British to act quickly and decisively, these sources added.

Konrad Henlein, Sudeten German leader, returned to Nurnberg this morning after a hurried overnight journey to Czechoslovakia, which he took at Hitler's behest.

Calls For Calmness

An informed source said the Sudeten fuehrer ordered his followers to remain calm and refrain from intensifying the conflict while his negotiations with Hitler, and Hitler's with Britain, are in progress.

Henlein hastened home after receiving reports that the "horse-whipping" of a Sudeten deputy by a Czech policeman in a border town had caused a rupture of the Sudeten-Prague government negotiations.

Henlein told his followers to reopen those negotiations, informed persons said.

Germany's patience with both the British and the Czechoslovaks in negotiations for German minority rights in Czechoslovakia is near its end, a general well aware of events said.

"We never will make war on the Czechs," the general told this writer at the Nazi party convention here, "but if the lives of our German brethren are not safe the day may come when we shall consider that they (the Czechs) started a war with us.

"In such case, of course, we shall remember that attack is the best method of defense."

A Czech mounted policeman yesterday rode into a noisy crowd in Maehrisch-Ostrau, near the German and Polish borders with Czechoslovakia, and, Germans said, struck with his riding crop the shoulders of a Sudeten German legislator.

Charges "Dilly-Dallying"

In speaking of the Maehrisch-Ostrau disturbance, the general asked "how much longer is this to go on?" He continued, as one closely in the know of things, with a criticism of British diplomacy thus far.

"After Viscount Runciman (Britain's mediator in Prague) had 14 days to orient himself, he should have had come forward clearly and explicitly and said: 'Are you willing to grant the Sudetens their just demand for autonomy or not? If yes, then give effect to your promises at once. If not, we wash our hands of the situation.'

"Instead, Runciman keeps dilly-dallying. The cabinet in London also cannot make up its mind.

"We had hoped at least that Sir Neville Henderson (the British ambassador) would return from London with something concrete and tangible.

"And what did he bring? Nothing but words." (Sir Neville, British said, in effect told the German foreign minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop, that Britain might be forced to fight if Germany acted with force to aid the Sudetens against Czechoslovakia).

What the Sudetens want, said the spokesman, "is one complete section of Czechoslovakia in which they are the masters where they can profess and Nazi weltanschuung (Nazi ideology) and where Germans will be governed by Germans."

The Czech government's scheme for dividing the republic into cantons "so small that Germans will be spread over all three of them," he continued "again begs the whole question."

CAPT. FRAKES IN PLANE ACCIDENT

Capt. F. F. Frakes, whose deliberate airplane crash through the roof of a house from a height of 2,000 feet was to have been the headliner at Wednesday afternoon's program at the DuQuoin State Fair at DuQuoin, Ill., was prevented from doing his stunt by accident.

Shortly after he ascended in his plane from a landing field west of DuQuoin, the machine crashed into a tree and was too badly damaged to permit Captain Frakes to go on with his stunt. Frakes was slightly injured, but motored several miles to the fair grounds to tell a crowd of nearly 10,000 that he would appear Saturday afternoon.

Captain Frakes' stunt was one of the features of the recent Missouri State Fair here.

U. S. TO BORROW OVER A BILLION IN BIG PROGRAM

Treasury Offers Huge Amount of Bonds and Notes For Sale

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—(AP)—Secretary of the Treasury Morgentha.. offered $1,133,460,900 worth of bonds and notes for sale to investors Wednesday. This was the first major step to finance the huge spending program voted by the last congress.

The offer included $700,000,000 of "new money" to finance part of the estimated $4,000,000,000 deficit to be incurred this fiscal year because of enlarged relief, public works and national defense spending.

An additional $433,460,900 worth of securities will be sold to refinance an equal sum of treasury notes maturing December 15.

The financing will send the federal debt to a record of about $38,300,000,000 on September 15, the issue date for the new securities. Although the debt is headed for another peak of more than $40,000,000,000 in the next year, next week it already will be $22,000,000,000 larger than the post-war low of December 31, 1930, and $12,000,000,000 more than the war-time peak set August 31, 1919.

Morgenthau specifically denied the size of the borrowing operation was influenced by the possibility of a European war which might upset money markets. However, observers noted the borrowing, plus September 15 quarterly income tax collections, would increase the treasury's cash working balance to about $2,500,000,000. This is five times as big as customary in normal times, and big enough to last the treasury many months if an emergency made further borrowing difficult or unusually expensive in the next few months.

Secretary Morgenthau said at today's press conference that the new securities offering had been "well received" in financial circles.

FRENCH ARMIES OF LAND AND AIR WATCH TROOPS

Planes Roar Over Maginot Line Observing German Moves

PRAYERS FOR PEACE BY DEVOUT WOMEN

At Some Points Soldiers of Two Countries Near Enough To Talk

SAREGUEMINES, On The French-German Frontier, Sept. 8—(AP)—France's air and land armies in the Maginot zone watched movements of German troops across the frontier today and awaited developments in Czechoslovakia.

Citizens of Metz awoke today to see a large army observation balloon floating from a cable high above the city. Two observers in the basket scanned the northern horizon with field glasses and kept in constant touch by telephone with a ground crew.

French observation and pursuit planes roared over valleys of the Maginot line of fortifications long before the morning fog had lifted.

During the night troops in the fortresses were strengthened by thousands of trained reserves. Constant watch was kept in the garrisons and at entrances to the underground fortifications.

By the time the night watch was relieved the drone of airplanes overhead told the land force that the air army also had taken their posts.

Flock to Churches To Pray

Little parish churches of the frontier zone were lighted this morning by hundreds of candles placed before the altars by devout Lorraine women.

Throughout Alsace and Lorraine—areas that felt the full brunt of the world war—for the last few days thousands of women of the frontier zone have flocked into Metz and Strasbourg cathedrals and hundreds of parish churches. They said many a prayer for peace and burned many a candle.

The cream of the French continental forces and reserve reinforcements, an estimated 350,000 men in all, waited ready for orders in the Maginot zone.

The Rhine river, rising slightly during the night, lapped at bases of the new Siegfried line of forts spreading along the German side of the stream from Lauterbourg to the Swiss border.

Close Enough To Chat

At many points along the Rhine and along the winding northern frontier through the Saar valley, small units of French and German troops were close enough to talk.

There were few exchanges of conversation, however, because the French soldiers assigned to posts on the actual frontier are almost all from central France and speak no German.

Even the frontier area outside the regular Maginot line contains many signs of French thoroughness in protecting the region.

Almost all farms in the northeastern area are fenced off with strong barbed wire looped through heavy iron posts instead of the usual wooden posts seen elsewhere in France.

That equipment came from the army supply corps and has turned every farmhouse into a potential stronghold surrounded by barbed wire barriers for defense, if need be.

French military quarters reported a German army corps of 25,000 had moved into fortifications near Lauterbourg.

Frontier guards, on both sides, declared: "Whatever happens, we are ready."

The Rhine forms the boundary opposite Lauterbourg. On the German side of the river several hundred Nazi labor corps members were rushing to completion a large unit of the Siegfried line.

Frenchmen watching the work from their side shouted across the stream: "If you think that's a fort, you ought to see the Maginot!"

The German reply was not heard because of the width of the river.

George Dugan presided as program chairman. Paul Jordan, of Birmingham, Ala., was a guest of Reinhold Fisher. Joe Rosenthal presented the club with a box of cigars in celebration of the advent of a new daughter.

SOCIAL SECURITY BOARD STUDIES CHANGES IN ACT

Would Broaden and Increase Scope of Benefits Provided

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—(AP)—The Social Security Board disclosed today it is preparing for congress a detailed report on the feasibility of dozens of proposed changes in the security act.

President Roosevelt asked last April for a study of methods of liberalizing and extending of the old-age benefit system.

The Social Security Advisory Council subsequently asked the board to investigate the possibility of extending the old-age insurance benefits to about 16,000,000 domestic servants, farm hands and self-employed persons now excluded from the act.

The studies will touch on these additional proposals, a spokesman for the board said:

1. Starting payment of old-age benefits before Janhary 1, 1942, the date now fixed by law.

2. Payment of larger benefits than now provided for persons retring during the earlier years of the program.

3. Distribution of benefits to aged wives and widows and young children of insured persons who die before reaching retirement age.

4. A change in the present method of investing the accumulating security taxes in a reserve fund before old-age annuities begin.

5. Downward revision of the individual and employer tax rates until the program reaches the peak of its operation in four or five years.

The advisory council, selected at the request of the senate finance committee, consists of five representatives of labor, six from employers and 11 from the public generally.

Shick, was taken before United States Commissioner Edna Morris, Saturday, and arraigned on the charge, and released on a $500 bond to appear in Federal Court in Jefferson City at its next term.

The Sedalian was charged with carrying on a retail business in fermented malt liquor without a license and with concealing a quantity of fermented liquor on which federal tax had not been paid.

OPINION THAT A POSTMISTRESS IN LAW VIOLATION

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—(AP)—The senate campaign expenditures committee expressed the opinion today in a formal statement that Mrs. Maude Toulson, postmistress of Salisbury, Md., had violated federal law by assisting Representative Lewis (D-Md) in his campaign for the Democratic senatorial nomination.

The committee said it would turn its findings over to the justice department to the postmaster general.

In his complaint against the Salisbury postmistress, Tydings told the committee:

"It is notorious in many places on the eastern shore that the postmasters have been told by the postmistress of Salisbury, and by others, to get out and work for Lewis."

The senator added it was "notorious" that the postmistress of Salisbury had accompanied Lewis on campaign trips.

"The committee is of the opinion," its statement said, "in view of the report it has received from its investigators that these allegations in the main are substantiated. * * *

Charge Not Sustained

The committee's statement said reports of its investigators "no not sustain the charge that the C. I. O. is financing the campaign of Representative Lewis."

Lewis, who is President Roosevelt's choice in the Maryland primary against Senator Tydings, asked the committee to investigate newspaper advertising which indicated the C. I. O. had helped finance his campaign. Lewis charged the advertising was paid by Tydings' supporters.

The committee investigation of the activities of Mrs. Toulson was undertaken at the request of Tydings.

The committee announced that it had instructed its investigators to look into other charges of both Lewis and Tydings.

Tydings told the committee recently that the Maryland collector of internal revenue had attempted to coerce federal workers in favor of Lewis. Lewis submitted to the committee an affidavit by a WPA worker who said he was discharged because he would not agree to support Tydings.

Chairman Sheppard (D-Tex) said the committee would meet Sunday, if necessary, to complete its Maryland investigation, before the primary election Monday.

No Comment To Make

SALISBURY, Md., Sept. 8.—Mrs. Maude Toulson, postmistress here, said today "I have no comment at all" on the senate campaign expenditures committee opinion she had violated federal law by assisting Rep. Lewis (D-Md) in his campaign for the Democratic senatorial nomination.

SUMMONS FOR BRITISH CABINET IN GRAVE CRISIS

Consider The Deepening Anxieties of European Situation

DEMAND FROM BRITISH LABOR

War or Peace For The Czechs Soon To Be Determined

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—The British cabinet was summoned today to meet next Monday, a few hours before Reichsfuehrer Hitler is expected to make at Nurnberg, Germany, a speech which may tell Europe whether there will be war or peace over Czechoslovakia.

The German chancellor's speech (about 1 p. m. EST) is scheduled as the climax of the tenth annual Nazi party congress, now in progress. European statesmen have expressed belief that by then he will have made up his mind how far he will go as "protector" of the Sudeten German minority of Czechoslovakia.

Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain issued the call for the cabinet meeting after a series of conferences with key ministers on the suspension of negotiations between the Prague government and the Sudeten Germans.

Informed quarters believed that Monday's session was called to reach a decision on what Britain should do if the Furhrer hearlded aggressive German action.

Demand By Labor

Earlier today was served on the government a formal demand that parliament be summoned as soon as possible to consider the deepening anxieties of the European situation.

Clement R. Attlee, leader of the labor opposition in the house of commons, presented this demand to Prime Minister Chamberlain as Chamberlain and other members of the "inner cabinet" gathered in London to study the Central European snarl.

Attlee acted in pursuance of a resolution adopted at Blackpool last night by a joint meeting of the national executive of the labor party, the executive of the parliamentary labor board and the general council of the trades union congress—the high command of labor.

Parliament recessed July 29 for three months.

Mutual defense arrangements between Britain and Ireland in the light of the European tension were believed to have been discussed at a breakfast meeting between Sir Thomas Inskip, minister for the coordination of British defenses, and Eamon De Valera, premier of Ireland.

Delays Departure

An announcement at the same time said that Viscount Halifax, foreign secretary, "reluctantly" had postponed his departure for a League of Nations meeting at Geneva in order to keep in close touch with the situation.

The meeting between Sir Thomas and De Valera was particularly timely because Britain, under her treaty with the new Irish state, is transferring Irish coast defenses at Berehaven, Cobi and Lough Swilly to the De Valera government.

Bublin, which gave Britain assurances last summer that it never would permit another power to use Irish territory as a base from which to attack the United Kingdom, also in taking vigorous steps to expand its military forces and naval defenses.

Harassed by a critical breakdown of negotiations between Czechoslovakia and her autonomy-demanding Sudeten German minority, Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain hurried back from a vacation in Scotland to meet Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax and Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer.

A breakdown in negotiations between the Czechoslovak government and the Sudeten German minority over the latter's demands for self-government was itself sufficient to bring the prime minister back to London, but Chamberlain was reported to be especially concerned about suspicions said to have been voiced abroad that Great Britain was responsible for the breakdown.

An editorial in the pro-government times, suggesting to Czechoslovakia that she might permit the Sudeten Germans to secede and join Germany, was blamed by some observers for this circumstance.

Jan Masaryk, Czechoslovak minister to London, obtained a foreign office denial that the editorial had official sanction or that it reflected the views of the British government.

OVER A MILLION DRIVERS' LICENSES

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 6.—(AP)—More than a million Missouri motorists bought the state's new drivers licenses—at an an average rate of more than 125 an hour—during the first year of the new license law's operation.

Up to September 1 a total of 1,119,250 licenses had been issued, Deputy Motor Vehicle Commissioner Percy B. McMahon announced today. The driver's license law went into effect September 6, 1937, percipitating a flood of applications, but the issuance of 22,750 licenses during August shows the demand for licenses is still strong.

Licenses of 778 drivers had been revoked or suspended up to September 1 for law violations, but 276 suspensions had been lifted leaving only 502 still in effect.

"Expressions from safety and law enforcement officials from all sections of the state are to the effect that the driver's license law has had a tremendous effect in making streets and highways more safe," said McMahan, who is in charge of the driver's license bureau. "The law has proved of great benefit in making the motoring public 'safety conscious'."

MANY ACCUSED OF RACKETEERING AND VIOLENCE

Thirteen Indictments By Federal Grand Jury At Kansas City

REPORT CRITICAL ON VANDALISM

"So-Called Organizers" Alleged To Have Intimidated

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 8—A special county grand jury returned 13 indictments today embracing vandalism and racketeering charges and placed the blame for bombings, window-smashing and terrorism on a group of "so-called labor organizers."

The report specified that the "so-called organizers" were interested only in self-enrichment and "have worked together to intimidate both employers and employes."

"There can be no doubt that the bombings and other destruction of property and the unmerciful beatings administered to laboring men can all be laid at the door of this same group of labor organizers," the report stated.

"The most serious aspect of the entire grand jury investigation lies in the fact that legitimate union labor has been used as a tool to fix prices of commodities and services by this same group of so-called labor organizers. . . . Union labor should put itself on guard against being used unlawfully for such purposes and should promptly remove all its representatives who so attempt to regulate the price at which anything may be sold. That is a matter entirely within the range and to be determined solely by the owner of the establishment selling the commodity or services."

The 13 indictments, returned with six others relating to routine cases, named approximately 50 persons. All names were kept secret, pending arrests, except that of W. H. (Wally) Mahan, deposed official of a retail clerks' union.

Mahan, named in a vandalism indictment, now is in jail serving a year's term for malicious destruction of property.

The grand jury, in a report on its investigation of more than two months, said it was evident "that honest union labor is being intimidated, threatened and subject to physical violence by a group of so-called union organizers whose only interest is to enrich themselves at the expense of the membership of labor union."

The report pointed out that every union labor man appearing before the grand jury condemned racketeering and vandalism.

The grand jury criticised as unjustified the recent action of the lumber yards in closing their plants and putting up signs stating labor violence and lack of police protection were the cause.

The report stated most of the lumber dealers "frankly admitted that the closing was unnecessary" and that the signs "had given Kansas City an unfortunate and uncalled for reputation."

The grand jury was called into session for the special investigation June 29. At that time more than 500 windows had been smashed in 170 business houses of Kansas City and nine mysterious bombs had been set off since the first of the year.

Thomas F. Fitzgerald, who became acting circuit judge here after his ouster by Gov. Lloyd C. Stark as state liquor supervisor, cautioned the jurors to keep in mind there are two sides in labor troubles.

Over 2,000 Questioned

"There may be labor racketeers," he said, "but there may be also employers who are defying the law of the land in conspiring to build a backfire against legitimate labor organizations."

The grand jury heard 466 witnesses. More than 2,000 persons were questioned by police and special investigators.

Earlier this week, Roy W. Rucker, a labor attorney, filed a petition asking that the grand jury foreman, Shannon Douglass, be disqualified because he was a lawyer and allegedly had disclosed secrets of the jury. Fitzgerald termed the petition an "eleventh hour" move and overruled it.

Cliff Langsdale, a labor attorney, assailed the grand jury in a Labor day speech, charging it was making use of "trumped-up evidence" against certain labor leaders. He also charged that $52,000 had been solicited from business men by an association to finance "spying" activities.

Douglass, replying indirectly to Langsdale, said the labor attorney had been given all the time he asked to appear before the grand jury with the information.

WAR CLOUDS DISCLOSE A TOUCH OF SILVER

There is one curious by-product of the current war scare which—years hence, when the scare has died down—will be recognized as something pretty valuable. That is the tremendous impetus which the scare has given the development of aviation.

A world which looks forward to war sees the airplane principally as a weapon. So, as with all other weapons, it strives frantically to improve it.

As a weapon, the airplane has most dreadful possibilities. If nothing comes of this vast activity except increased possibilities for destruction, the world is in a bad case indeed.

But in the long run the airplane is only secondarily a weapon. It is the fastest means of transportation mankind has yet devised, and over the years its usefulness should far outweigh its destructiveness. And because of the present war-scare, progress in airplane design and construction is going forward these days very much faster than would otherwise be possible.

* * *

We sometimes forget how completely our modern world is built around the idea of fast transportation and speedy communications. The world economy of today may be a disjointed and chaotic thing, but it works to the extent that it does work only because it is served by a network of rapid carriers.

In America, for instance, upwards of 300,000,000 letters are carried annually by air. Some 2,600,000 people travel by air each year. More than 10,000 planes are kept busy on commercial jobs, carrying mail, people, and express across the country. If the railroad and the automobile played a major role in welding our country into a unit, the airplane is beginning to occupy an equally important place.

* * *

All of this means solidarity, community of interest, understanding. It also means wider markets, a greater chance for commercial and industrial expansion, a freer and farther flow of trade.

And so, ultimately, these very trying days which we are living through now will give us an extremely useful by-product. It may be perfectly true that what we get will hardly be worth the danger that is afflicting world civilization. But it is at least comforting to reflect that out of today's nervous, anxious confusion there will come something, at least, that will be of permanent value to the race.

EATS AND VOTES

Word arrives that a massive work is to be published in the near future on the subject of group eating in America.

If the book isn't going to have a little essay on the causes and effects of mixing food with politics, it ought to.

Consider, for instance, the effect of the political banquet or eat-match on (a) the public at large, and (b) the diners.

How many votes have been won by the simple procedure of dining out-doors on barbecued pig, corn-on-the-cob, or baked clams will never be known. For no particular reason the man who does one or the other in the proper sections of the country acquires a kind of good-guy air. How many votes have been lost by the procedure of sitting down to terrapin, squab, truffles and champagne will also never be known.

And consider, friends, how different the political scene might be were it not for the plain, run-of-the-mine, every-day kind of banquet all politicians find themselves at throughout every campaign period. What feuds might not have arisen, what idiocies not performed, what senseless challenges not hurled and colossal blunders not made if it had not been for long-term diets of shellacked chicken-legs, cottony mashed potatoes, olive-drab peas, and coffee with the chill taken off.

'—IN YOUR OWN WORDS'

"Foreign office spokesmen" and statesmen who speak under their own names must frequently feel like teachers asking of their class, "Now what do you get out of this passage?"

The notion is suggested by the responses to the recent talk by Sir John Simon, Britain's chancellor of the exchequer, on the situation in Europe. Sir John observed in effect that the "case of Czechoslovakia" needed to be handled with care, and expressed the fear that any local quarrel that might arise out of it might get out of hand.

He referred in passing to the existence of un-named countries with "a system of government very different from ours," and deplored the attitude that friendship with them was impossible.

The extreme ends of the Rome-Berlin axis failed to respond in unison. Two headlines in one American newspaper the next day ran: "Germans Belittle Simon's Address," and "Rome Comforted by Simon Speech." Spokesmen of the Reich were described as disappointed and upset. Spokesmen in Rome felt gratified at what they interpreted as a friendly and conciliatory gesture toward Germany.

Of course, there are two sides to the thing. Audiences at statesmen's speeches probably feel on occasion like students who have been asked by the teacher to interpret passages which the author seemed to have written out of both sides of his mouth.

VISITS HERE AFTER A LONG ABSENCE

Dr. J. Calvin Settles, of Oakland, Calif., a resident of Sedalia thirty-seven years ago, arrived in Sedalia Monday to renew acquaintances and to visit the scenes of his home years ago. He stopped at Hotel Bothwell.

Dr. Settles, who is 71 years of age, when a resident of Sedalia, lived at Sixteenth street and Moniteau avenue. Monday he visited with Dan Dean, E. W. Couey, Charles H. Bard, Charles Williams and other Sedalians who were friends years ago.

Commenting on the city Dr. Settles said he noticed particularly the splendidly paved streets. "As I remember Sedalia," he said, "there were narrow dirt streets, and it now is one of the best cities for well paved, any many miles of good streets."

One of Dr. Settles' neighbors in Oakland is Ralph Blair, a former Sedalian.

Dr. Settles left this afternoon for Windsor, where he lived sixty-two years ago, and will then go to Clinton, where his father is buried, then on to Dallas, San Antonio, and to San Francisco.

CHILD KILLED AS AUTO PLUNGES INTO RAVINE

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 3.—(AP)—Lodema Scherer, 2, was killed today when the auto in which she was riding with her father plunged into a 20-foot ravine on U. S. Highway 24 north of Independence.

The father, Ted Scherer, was dangerously injured. His wife and another child were treated for shock and cuts. The baby's body was thrown 20 feet from the car.

CITY REPLACES OLD SCALE; AN OFFICER NAMED

Don Mahoney Appointed to Police Force; R. A. Streeter Resigns

The city of Sedalia will have a new scale, according to action taken by the city council at its regular meeting Tuesday night which authorized the purchase of a new twenty ton scale, and a thirty-four foot platform.

The present scale, according to Alderman S. J. Timborious, is more than forty years old, was built for the wagon days, is only a ten ton scale, and does not meet present day requirements.

A. J. Knipp, chairman of the sewer and sanitation committee, was authorized to renew the present contract for a dumping ground, which has expired. The contract is with George White, to whom the city pays $50 a year for permission to dump in the old rock quarry on Engineer avenue.

Alderman Elmer Sumners, chairman of the finance committee, asked permission of the council to employ special council to assist City Counselor Fred F. Wesner in trying the suit brought by the city against bondsmen for Tom Dugan, former city collector. The suit will probably come up for trial at the September term of court. Authority was given for the employment of special council.

Appoint Policeman

The resignation of R. A. Streeter, as a police officer, was read, and the name of Don Mahoney, submitted by the mayor and approved by the council as his successor. Timborious moved approval and Frank Hugelman seconded his action.

An application was read from C. L. Maness, applying for a position as an officer on West Sixteenth street, together with a petition from twenty-seven persons asking the city to employ an officer for that street. Both the application and petition were referred to the police committee, Walter Pinkepank, chairman.

A petition, signed by fourteen persons, submitted, asked for the installation of an arc light in the block on Cooper street, between Missouri avenue and Grand avenue. The petition stated that there are many trees, the street is very dark, and it is difficult for one to find their way on the street at night. It was referred to the police, gas and lights committee, Pinkepank, chairman.

Ask License Revoked

Dr. George F. Townsend presented a petition, signed by fifty persons, complaining of the manner in which the business establishment at 601 West Sixteenth street is operated by Mrs. Alberta Walling, and asking that her license to sell beer be revoked. Dr. Townsend made a few remarks, which were supplemented by Ralph Boies, druggist.

City Counselor Wesner stated that according to law, a person against whom a complaint is made must be given ten days notice, in writing, to appear before the council and show cause why the license should, or should not be revoked. On motion of Dr. F. L. Fulkerson, seconded by Bohling, it was voted to take such action, and to notify Mrs. Walling to appear before the council, probably at the next meeting.

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 3.—Ledger Veazy, a Missouri prison convict on an outside detail jumped off a prison truck and escaped tonight in St. Charles, prison officials here were informed.

Details of the escape were not available. Veazy was serving a 20-year sentenced for first degree robbery from Pettis county.

Veazy and a William Madden were charged jointly with the holdup and robbing of O. A. Kowertz of Warsaw, Mo., on October 9, 1934. The two were apprehended in Kilgore, Texas, after they had left a string of worthless checks flowing through Oklahoma and Texas.

Both waived extradition to the Missouri authorities, Sheriff W. L. Marlin, then Chief of Police of Sedalia, and then Sheriff W. W. Bolton. The two officers accompanied by the then Mayor O. B. Poundstone, returned Veazy and Madden to Sedalia.

The men made confessions to the local officers on their return to Missouri, and soon appeared in the Pettis County Circuit Court and pleaded guilty, both men accepting twenty years terms.

Kowertz picked Veazy and Madden up near KaKnsas City as hitch-hikers, and after he had headed south on highway 65, the two held Kowertz up, made him drive into a small road off the highway and there robbed him of his money and car.

CHARGES AGAINST THREE ARRESTED BY THE POLICE

Accused of Driving Motor Vehicles While Intoxicated

The appeal to "Drive Safely" evidently was not heeded by three men who police arrested shortly after noon Wednesday and charged them with driving motor vehicles while intoxicated.

A school stop sign at St. Patrick's school was knocked over and broken by a man whose name was given the officers as James Greer, and who police said was driving his car in a very reckless manner. Greer was finally stopped at Thirteenth street and Massachusetts avenue after he had struck two automobiles and failed to stop.

After knocking over the stop sign at the school, at the time when school children were leaving St. Patrick's school, he turned south on Massachusetts avenue, and near the Smith-Cotton high school struck a Plymouth sedan of Emmett Trader doing considerable damage to the car, and then continued on to strike the Ford coach of Eugene Maupin in front of the home of Robert Q. Henderson, 1014 South Massachusetts avenue "nicking" a fender on the car, and then continued south to Thirteenth street where he tried to turn the corner.

In turning the corner he ran up over the curb onto the parking and damaged the left front wheel, and here Mr. Maupin and Mr. Henderson overtook the man and held him until State Highway Trooper P. E. Corl and Police Officer Don Mahoney arrived on the scene and took him into custody.

Two Others Arrested

Two men riding small motorscooters were likewise taken into custody by the police. They were Grover Kabler and Leonard Forster, who were endeavoring to "put on a show" on East Sixth street between Montgomery and Marvin avenue.

Police Officers Raymond Fetters and Ed Young were returning to police headquarters from the Bothwell hospital where they had taken a man who was ill, and the two "dare-devils" nearly crashed into the police car. The officers stopped and upon questioning the two took them into custody. men and scooters.

Wednesday Prosecuting Attorney Job Harned issued charges against all three with driving motor vehicles while intoxicated. The charges were filed in the court of Judge Charles W. Bente, sitting as ex-officio justice of the peace, and the men were taken to the county jail where they were examined by a physician, and then locked up.

Trooper Paul E. Corl Wednesday said that other charges would probably be filed against Greer, of leaving the scene of an accident. The state patrolman is also making an investigation as to whether any of the three men have drivers licenses.

A person driving a motor-scooter must have a driver's license, otherwise he is subject to prosecution on a misdemeanor. The motor-scooters are classed as a motor-cycle in accordance with the state laws, he said.

DID NOT GET $15 OFF SWEARNGIN SHERIFF SAYS

Declared Amount Was Paid To Sedalia Attorney As a Fee

Commenting on the $27,500 suit filed against him, on his bond, by G. C. Swearngin, Sedalia lin, said that he did not ask for, nor get $15 from Swearngin. That amount of money, he said, was counted out by Swearngin the morning he was released from jail, and handed, as a fee, to Fred Wesner, attorney, who had been called on by friends of Swearngin and asked to take charge of his case.

The sheriff said that on the night in question, August 11, Swearngin called the jail about 11:30 o'clock, insisting that one of the inmates needed hospitalization. The officer replied that it was not necessary. Swearngin, the sheriff said, then called the prosecuting attorney, L. J. Harned, and Circuit Judge Dimmitt Hoffman, complaining that the inmate was ill and should have hospital care. Dr. J. E. Mitchell, county health physician made a visit to the jail, examined the prisoner, and said he was all right. All that, said the sheriff, and with the belief, according to the officer, that Swearngin might be conveying articles to some of the inmates in the jail, caused him to go to his home and take him in custody for investigation. He placed him in jail, he said, after a tussle in the front yard of the jail and as they went down the corridor.

Inquired About Warrant

The next morning, the sheriff continued, he went to the prosecuting attorney's office, explaining the situation, said he was holding Swearngin for investigation, and asked if a warrant could be obtained. He was informed, he said, by the prosecuting attorney he did not believe there was a statute under which a warrant could be issued.

He returned to the jail, the sheriff asserts, was visited by Fred Wesner, attorney, who had previously called on the 'phone, and after being assured that Swearngin would cease his calls and remain away from the jail, he was released.

Attorney Wesner said that early on the morning of August 12, he was visited at his office by two men who said they were friends of Swearngin. They told him, he continued, that Swearngin had been arrested and asked if he could learn why he was being held. Mr. Wesner called the jail, then went over, asked that Swearngin be brought out into the living room, which was done, and had a conversation with him. Mr. Wesner said he asked Swearngin if he was to understand that he was being employed by him, either to attempt to have him released or represent him in a preliminary hearing if one was necessary, because if he was his fee would be $15. Swearngin said that was agreeable, and when it was decided that he was to be discharged Swearngin was handed an envelope, sealed, and with his name on it.

Mr. Wesner said that he (Wesner) tore the end off the envelope, counted out the contents, approximately $60, in the presence of Swearngin and John Starkey, deputy sheriff, and asked Swearngin if that was the right amount. Swearngin said it was. "Well, you might as well pay me now," said Wesner. Swearngin said, "All right," and Wesner counted out fifteen dollars, three five dollar bills, and handed the rest of the money to Swearngin. The latter said he owed someone at the jail thirty cents for making a purchase of cigarettes, or something for him, and gave Starkey that amount.

Earlier in the morning Swearngin had asked permission to 'phone his father. He was brought out into the living quarters by Deputy Sheriff John Starkey, and while there gave Starkey the money to keep for him. Starkey placed it in an envelope, sealed it, and put it away.

FERTILIZER NEED FOR SEEDING TO GROW BARLEY

Increased Return From Its Use On Farm of John M. Sneed

Above: Missouri early beardless barley as produced on the John Sneed farm, Sedalia, in the spring of 1938. On the left Fertilizer was drilled with the barley; while on the right, no fertilizer application was made. The fertilizer increased the yield approximately 20 bushels per acre.

"It doesn't pay to seed barley without fertilizer," is the opinion of John M. Sneed from the observations and experience in the producing of Missouri early beardless barley during the past few years. His experience on the crop barley which he harvested this spring where he secured an increase of approximately 20 bushels per acre by the use of fertilizer shows very clearly the value of applying the fertilizer.

One hundred fifty pounds per acre of a complete commercial fertilizer was drilled in with the barley when it was seeded in the fall of 1937 with a production of 22.7 bushels per acre on the fertilized part of the field. A small area in the field was not fertilized and produced 2.8 bushels per acre. The cost of the fertilizer was approximately $2.00 per acre, which gave Mr. Sneed an increased return of approximately $6.00 per acre on his barley.

Another Pettis county farmer, J. A. DeJarnette, of Sedalia, made an application of 150 lbs. of 32 per cent superphosphate per acre on the barley which he seeded for harvest in 1938 and secured a yield of 47 bushels per acre.

There has been a substantial increase during the last year in the number of Pettis county farmers who are raising barley. Its early maturity which makes it a good nurse crop for grasses and legumes and also gives it the advantage of escaping much of the damege done by chinch bugs and spring drouths and its ability to provide an abundant amount of pasture particularly in the fall as well as making a good grain crop are some of the outstanding characteristics which have caused an increased acreage in the county.

Pointers Are Given

In seeding winter barley, several steps must be kept in mind if the seeding can be expected to be successful. They are:

1. Preparation of a clean, mellow seed bed.
2. Use a pure seed (certified seed desirable).
3. Drill in liberal amounts of commercial fertilizer with the seeding.
4. Treat seed for stripe and smut.
5. Seed early in September at the rate of two bushels per acre if wanted for pasture or seed three to four weeks later at a slightly reduced rate per acre for maximum grain production.
6. Seed on a medium to fertile land.
7. Use a recommended variety.

On the more fertile soils, particularly where a legume crop has been produced within the past few years, the general recommendation is to apply an application of 125-150 pounds of 20 per cent superphosphate or its equivalent; however, on many fields of this kind, fertilizer carrying a small amount of potash with the phosphorus may be more desirable.

On medium fertile fields which have not produced a legume crop recently, the use of a high analysis complete fertilizer such as 4-16-4 at 125 to 150 pounds per acre will probably give best results.

The Ethyl Mercury phosphate dust treatment (new improved ceresan) has proven to be one of the most satisfactory treatments in controlling stripe, covered smut, and black, loose smut in barley. Apply at the rate of one-half ounce per bushel in a mixing machine. The dusted grain should be kept in a bin, pile or wagon box for at least 24 hours during which time it should remain uncovered. Seed treated in this manner will be ready for planting immediately after this period or may be stored for as long as four weeks.

Instructions should be followed in making this treatment as an excess of the dust may injure germination. Seed after being treated should not be fed to farm animals.

When barley is seeded early, it must be kept pastured off so that it will not joint. Jointed barley, even if pastured off after jointing cannot be expected to go through the winter nor can over-grazed barley be expected to go through the winter.

Fall grazing should start when the growth is four to five inches tall and proceed through the fall so that approximately three inches of growth goes into the winter.

At the Columbia station, early seeded barley on medium land that has been fertilized has produced as much as 30 cattle days pasture per acre during the fall months.

A good supply of Missouri earl beardless barley is available formation, write or call your county agent.

WILLIAM HENRY LYNCH, Picturesque Schoolman Called "Pioneer Educator of the Ozarks"

A number of Missouri statesmen have had expressive sobriquets bestowed on them by Missouri newspapers for their contributions to the state and nation, but few schoolmen have been thus recognized to such an extent as William Henry Lynch, an unusual educator who is known variously as "the Grand Old Man," "Pioneer Educator of the Ozarks" and the "Old Educational Warrior." For six decades this picturesque education promoter served the educational needs of the Ozarks and Southwest Missouri. As "school visitor" for the fourth normal school district he visited every school of consequence in twenty-one counties, encouraged teachers, inspired pupils and educated school boards.

William Henry Lynch was born on a farm near Houston, Texas county, Missouri, on September 6, 1839, ninety-nine years ago this week. Little data exists concerning his early life and education. He was one of the pioneer schoolmen who received his elementary training from his parents and then began teaching in a rural school.

With the outbreak of the war he joined the Union forces, and served until the end of the conflict, fighting with the 32nd Missouri regiment where he rose to the rank of captain. Lynch was with Sherman on his "march to the sea," after which his company marched north to Washington, D. C., and from there to Louisville, Kentucky. There on July 4, when General Sherman delivered his farewell address to his troops, Captain Lynch was regimental officer of the day. Returning to St. Louis, he was mustered out of service at Benton Barracks on July 22, 1865.

Immediately after his discharge from the army he went to Columbia, Missouri, and entered the university, where he was especially interested in studies of the classics, languages and mathematics. He also became quite active in the University Athenaean Literary society. In 1866, after having been a university student for one year, he left to become the principal of the Steelville academy. Apparently he returned to the university during vacations for he was able to take a master of arts degree in 1868. Later he spent one summer at Harvard.

"School Visitor"

Lynch's real career as a teacher and school administrator began in 1866 while he was at the academy at Steelville, in Crawford county. He became superintendent of schools at Salem, Missouri, in 1873, and later served in that capacity at Mountain Grove, West Plains, Cabool, and Ozark, going from the latter to the Southwest Missouri State Teachers College at Springfield. Here for fourteen years he promoted the cause of education in southwest Missouri.

His special function on the staff of the teachers college was that of "school visitor." During an era of few automobiles and few telephones in rural homes it was his task to visit the schools and encourage promising young persons to go to college, preferably to the normal school at Springfield. At the end of his second year the board of regents asked Lynch to cease his activities for a time as the capacity of the school had been reached. When only six years old the normal school had an enrollment of 1,200.

Lynch was the friend of all newspaper men and is generally given credit for having promoted the use of newspapers in the classroom. He often said: "The newspapers and the public schools are the universities of the people. Every person who can read the Lord's prayer should take his home paper."

Few schoolmen have had a wider range of interests than Lynch, who held membership in many fraternal and public organizations. The new elementary school at Salem was named in his honor, and the Ozark press association presented to the Southwest State Teachers' College a bronze memorial tablet bearing his name and the date of his birth and death.

William Henry Lynch wrote no books, neither did he expound a new philosophy of education, yet in moral and ethical influence he is recognized as a man of outstanding importance in the history of public schools in the Ozarks. He died at Springfield, Missouri, on September 29, 1924.

SLEEPING SICKNESS BREAKS OUT AMONG HORSES ON PETTIS COUNTY FARMS

Encephalitis or sleeping sickness of horses has broken out in Pettis county. The disease is caused by a specific filter-passing virus which affects the brain tissue of horses causing marked disturbances of the central nervous system. The number of horses affected on any one particular farm varies from one to two animals to as high as 50 per cent or more, according to reports to the county agent's office.

Observations in the field indicate that the disease is transmitted by blood-sucking insects. The disease is seasonal, usually appearing in July and disappearing in the fall soon after the first killing frost. The occurence of the disease is less where the horses have been protected from being bitten by blood-sucking insects.

The first symptom that is noticed may be depression or lagging at work. The animal usually runs a high temperature, 104 to 106 degrees F., in the early stages of the disease. This may be followed by incoordination, prostration and motor and sensory paralysis appearing rapidly in the order given. When the disease is first noticed, a veterinarian should be called to administer treatment. Quiet and rest are essential for the stricken horses. A good investment would be thermometer and take the temperature of the horses twice a day, since a rise in temperature is the first symptoms of the disease. If the temperature exceeds 101 degrees F., the horse should not be worked and carefully watched and kept in a darkened stall, that is as far removed from the sun's ray as possible.

Affected horses should have water as often as they will drink. They should be fed succulent feeds such as bran, threshed oats, and some green corn with the ears removed.

Horses that get down, do not have as good a chance for recovery as those that can be kept on their feet. Weakened horses should be placed in a supporting frame to keep them on their feet. Purgatives are not recommended as they weaken the animal.

Since it is believed that blood-sucking insects are responsible for the transmission of the disease, every effort should be directed toward preventing animals from being bitten by insects. This may be done by the use of fly sprays and keeping the horses quartered in darkened stalls.

Horses should be watched for symptoms. A local veterinarian should be called to administer treatment. Protective measures promptly adopted and good care of affected animals will do a lot to alleviate a bad situation.

The use of a vaccine, available through the veterinarian, has been reported to be a quick and effective method of immunization of animals.
